GIRL AND MAN SHOT

ATTACKED IN NEWTON CAFE

DENNEHY'S RELEASE DEMANDED

Mrs. Rose Dennehy of No. 1 Ice court, Charlestown, mother of Patrick Dennehy, one of the fifty Boston boys said to have been lured into the British army, declared today that she would demand that the United States restore her son to her.

Meanwhile agents of the State Department and Department of Justice are in Boston investigating the charges of Congressman Peter F. Tague that British recruiting agents are violating American neutrality laws by illegally enlisting Boston boys in the British army. Their system, he declares, is a modern manifestation of the old time "press gang" so odious to American citizens.

The Congressman declares scores of boys have been induced to ship as hostlers on English ships, with the express purpose of sending them to the front as soon as they arrive in Europe.

Mrs. Dennehy was informed for the first time today that her boy had enlisted in the British army. She was completely prostrated by the news and refused to be comforted. She insists that the boy has been shot and killed and is now lying dead in the trenches. She demands that the U. S. government return her boy to her and is loud in her denunciation of the British government which would steal from a poor American widow a boy scarcely more than a child and almost her only support.

She also blames the school laws of this country if her boy is killed. But for them, she says, her boy would be working here with a good job, which the school authorities made him give up.

U. S. DEMANDS DISCHARGE.

The father of young Patrick died about the time the boy was born. Patrick and another brother were brought up by the mother after a hard struggle. They are now her only support. It was the investigation into the disappearance of young Dennehy that led to the disclosure of the alleged plot for enlisting recruits in Boston.

The State Department has demanded of the British Government Dennehy's immediate discharge from the army, together with the discharge of fourteen other Boston boys, recruited from the steamer Cambrian, which sailed from Boston May 3, on the ground that their enlistment creates a breach of the United States neutrality laws.

That the State Department is gravely concerned over the discovery of the alleged activity of British recruiting agents is evidenced by the activity of the Department of Justice agents in their investigations.

It is generally understood that these agents have been ordered "forthwith" to ascertain to what extent the practice has been systematically organized in Boston.

The report of the United States Consul-General at London in confirmation of the charges, is to the effect that he has actually discovered that it is the custom of recruiting sergeants to board steamers from the United States and to enlist young men for service regardless of their national allegiance, and to rush these "recruits" to receiving stations before the ship had docked and they had time to make objections.

The discovery of the alleged "press-gang" was made by Congressman Tague as the result of his investiga-

MAN JAILED FOR COHEN SLAYING

ARREST IN SOUTH END KILLING

The Boston police today received word from eJrsey City that Delavan J. Rogers had been arrested there as one of the murderers of Samuel Cohen, the junkman who was lured into the basement of No. 116 West Springfield street, South End, last Saturday, and there robbed and shot.

The arrest was made by Patrolman Doty and O'Connor, at No. 404 Summit avenue, Jersey City. The Jersey City police say Rogers confessed being present when Cohen was killed, but claimed that Robert Tracey fired the fatal shot.

The Boston police said today they expect Tracey to be arrested within a few hours. Sergeant Livingstone of Station 5 and Detective Towle of Headquarters went to New York last week, and will bring Rogers back. Papers for his extradiction will be forwarded at once, and he is expected to be brought to Boston Wednesday of next week.

The murder of Cohen had unusual dramatic elements. He lived at No. 21 Rose street.

His murderers early last Saturday met Morris Ttaltel, another junkman, and said they had some junk to sell him. Thus they lured him to the cellar of the Springfield street house, there robbed him and locked him in a closet.

Shortly after, he heard them return with Cohen, heard an argument, a shot, silence, and after a long period, when one of the murderers went out and away, he heard shovels at work as a hole was dug to bury Cohen's body.

The murderers left Taitel in the closet and fled. He escaped and notified the police.

Germans Again Bombard England From the Air

By HERBERT TEMPLE,

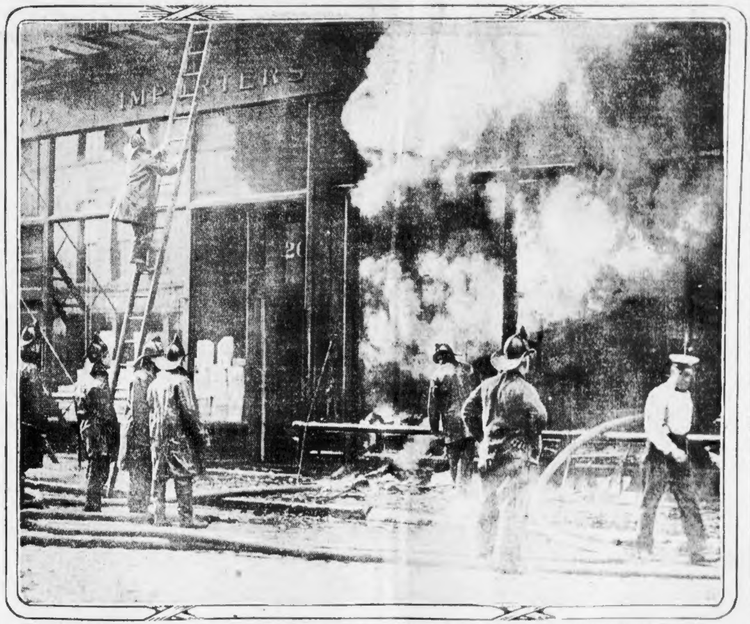
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, June 5.—Another German air raid was made over the eastern and southeastern coast of England last night.

Bombs were dropped at several points, but the Admiralty in an official statement said that little material damage was done.

This was the eighteenth air raid launched against the British coast by the Germans, the seventeenth being an attack upon the city of London early in the week.

CHEMICAL EXPLOSION AND FLAMES WRECK DEWEY-SQUARE DRUG STORE



Firemen fighting stubborn blaze which followed an explosion of chemicals in the store of the Walker Rintels Drug Company, at the corner of Summer and Purchase streets.

An explosion of chemicals wrecked the drug store of the Walker-Rintels Drug Company on the first floor of the Wentworth Building, at Summer and Purchase street, early today, and started a fire which gave the firemen a stiff battle.

The explosion, which occurred in the rear of the store on the Purchase street side, blew out three large plate glass windows. The whole side of the store was immediately enveloped in flames.

ALARM QUICKLY SOUNDED.

An alarm was hastily sounded by Patrolman Michael Sullivan of the Court square station, who was passing when the explosion occurred.

When the apparatus arrived on the scene, the entire Purchase street side of the store was a mass of fire. Sheets of flame were shooting across the width of the street. For a time, it appeared as though the entire building would burn.

Chief McDonough, who was one of the first to arrive at the scene, immediately ordered three lines of hose played on the flames. It was only the quick action of the firemen that prevented the flames from spreading. The fire was kept confined to the drug store, where the loss was heavy.

STIR AMONG COMMUTERS.

The fire caused considerable excitement among commuters arriving on trains at the South Station. Engines were rushing to the fire from every direction. A large squad of police from the Court square station was soon on the scene and kept the large crowd from interfering with the work of the firemen.

MAN AND GIRL IN AN AUTO CRASH

A touring car in which John V. McClure of No. 207 Squantum street, Quincy, was returning from Nantasket early today with a young woman who refused to give her name, was wrecked by collision with a pole in Quincy square.

McClure and the young woman were thrown out and suffered from cuts and shock. They were treated by Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and went home.

The accident happened shortly after 2 a. m., near the junction of Hancock and Saville streets.

CHAUFFER SHOOTS GIRL; KILLS MAN WHO TRIES TO RESCUE HER

A girl was fatally wounded and a man who tried to save her life was shot dead in a Newton Centre restaurant this afternoon, as a result of a quarrel between sweethearts.

The man who did the shooting is Charles E. Warren of Grant street, Allston, a chauffeur.

The murdered man, who gave his life in an effort to save the girl, was Walter G. Green, proprietor of the restaurant.

The girl, Ruby Stewart, a waitress, lies at the point of death at the Newton Hospital, a bullet in her head, another in her body.

John Fay, a postman, was responsible for the murderer's capture. Unarmed, he grappled with Warren, prevented him from again using his revolver and held him till the police arrived.

Mrs. Green, the slain man's wife, witnessed the tragedy.

CROWD SEE THE STRUGGLE.

The tragedy occurred shortly after noon. Centre street, where the restaurant is situated, is the main street of Newton Centre.

Half a dozen persons in the restaurant witnessed the shoot ing, but were paralyzed and helpless in the swift sequence of eventes.

MAN IS KILLED, GIRL IS BADLY WOUNDED IN NEWTON SHOOTING

Scores witnessed Fay's struggle with the murderer.

Six weeks ago, through an employment agency, Miss stewart was engaged as a waitress in Green's restaurant. She formerly lived in Brookline. When she went to work in Newton Centre, Mrs. Green, th dead man's wife, took her to board at their home at No. 2 Ripley terrace.

Yesterday Warren went to the rstaurant, and he and the girl had a quarrel. Green heard Warren threaten to "get" the girl Warren left with this threat upon his lips.

Miss Stewart dismissed the incident without comment.

Today the lunch-hour rush was just commencing when an automobile drew up outside the restaurant. Warren, the chauffeur, alighted, walked briskly across the sidewalk and entered. As he stood in the doorway Miss Stewart saw him. His eyes were upon her. His hand was at his hip.

He took a step toward her. She screamed, turned and rushed for the door leading into an open yard behind the restaurant. Warren drew an automatic revolver and fired a shot at her. It missed. Instantly Green, the proprietor, sprang at warren and grappled with him.

Warren coolly freed his pistol arm, lifted the weapon, pressed the uzzle against Green's head and fired.

CHASES THE GIRL.

Green collapsed in a limp heap. Warfen shook himself free of the man's clutches, stepped across the prostrate body, looked about the restaurant an dsaw that no one else would interfere, then jumped through the rear door after the girl.

Miss Stewart—so quickly had the whole thing happened—was only thirty feet away, running for her life.

Warren fired three shots, swift as a machine gun.

The first was wild; the second struck the girl in the body; the third hit her in the back of the head.

She screamed, stumbled and fell upon her face.

Warren, satisfied, returned the weapon to his pocket. He turned to the right through the yard surrounding the home of S. A. Waller on Pelham street.

Mr. Waller, who is an old man, saw him. Warren walked steadily through the yard to Pelham street, turned into Centre street and walked toward his automobile, standing at the curb before the restaurant.

GRABBED HEAVY CANE.

Walker grabbed a heavy cane and started after him.

Warren walked to his automobile. As he approached it, those inside recovered from the first paralysis of surprise, rushed into the street.

"Murder," one man shouted. "There's murder. Hold that man."

He pointed to Warren.

Postman John Fay was passing, heard the cries, saw Warren. He leaped at him, caught him about the body.

Warren wrenched an arm free, pulled his pistol, tried to turn it upon Fay.

PRISONER COLAPSES.

Fay caught the wrist of the hand that held the weapon and forced it into the air. Warren tried to twist it down against his own head. Fay held him helpless.

In a second, Patrolmen Enegess and Hardigan, who had heard the shots, reached the spot. They leaped upon Fay and Warren, bore them both to the ground, kicked the pistol from Warren's hand and pinioned the murderer.

Warren collapsed, trembling and shaken. Within a space of minutes he was on his way to the police station in West Newton in the prison van. Miss Stewart's unconscious form was tenderly lifted, placed in an ambulance and hurried to the Newton Hospital.

The police ordered all out of the restaurant, where Green's body lay upon the floor. Medical Examiner George L. West was summoned and admitted. No others were allowed to enter.

Warren was questioned by the police as to the motive for the shooting. For a long time he was unable to answer any questions.

Miss Stewart, it was said at the hospital, was dangerously wounded and would probably die.

Mrs. Green, who saw her husband slain, was helped to her home by friends, near a collapse from the shock.

S. A. Walker, who from his home on Pelham street saw the shooting of the girl, said:

"I heard the shots in the restaurant. That was what attracted my attention. Then I saw the girl run out into the yard behind the restaurant.

"A moment after the man came, fired three shots, and the girl fell.

"The man put his weapon back in his pocket, then walked through my yard to Pelham street.

"I saw him turn toward Centre street. I grabbed my cane and started after him.

"When I got to Centre street, he was grappling with Fay in front of the restaurant."

ZEPPELINS DROP POISON GAS BOMBS

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 5.—A great battle between the Austro-German army which is driving toward Lemberg from the south, and the Russians is in progress along the Dniester River, thirty miles south of Lemberg.

The Russian troops operating between the Stryj and Tysmienic rivers in eastern Galicia had fallen back, but attempts of the Germans to dislodge them from their positions on the Dniester were repulsed with heavy losses, and the Russians took 700 prisoners and many machine guns.

Of the prisoners, seventeen were officers.

On the Bobr River front, the Germans have resumed the bombardment of Ossowiec with their heavy guns.

DROP GAS BOMBS.

A new feature of warfare, involving the use of poisonous gases has been inaugurated on the Polish front by the Germans. Zeppelins carrying bombs filled with deadly fumes, have sailed over the Russian position near the Bzura and Rawka rivers, dropping these missiles upon the Russian troops.

The Germans upon the lower San, west of the Rudnik, are in retreat. The text of the official statement follows:

"In the Shavli region on Wednesday and Thursday there were only skirmishes that had little result for either side.

"On the Bobr River front in Poland, the enemy on Wednesday night bombarded Ossowiec with their heavy guns.

"On the Narew River front, and to the left of Vistula, there are no decisive developments.

"German balloons have dropped bombs filled with asphyxiating gases upon the Bzura and Rawka river fronts.

GAIN AT RUDNIK.

"In Galicia on the left bank of the lower San and to the confluence of the Wisloka with the San, we gained further successes, particularly at Rudnik. Our troops on Thursday continued to drive back the enemy in disorderly retreat.

"On the right bank of the San the enemy is continuing his attacks in the valley of the Wisznia River.

"Between Przemysl and the Dniester River in the region of Krukienice we again drove back the enemy and inflicted enormous losses.

"Between the Tysmienica and the Stryj rivers our troops, which have been hampering the enemy's progress, fell back upon the Dniester bridge head. The enemy attempted to storm our entrenchments on the night of June 4-5 and was driven back, abandoning heaps of bodies in front of our lines. In the course of our counter attacks we took 700 prisoners, including seventeen officers and machine guns."

Submarine Sinks French Steamer

LONDON, June 5.—The French steamship Penfeld, bound from Nantes, France, to Cardiff, Wales, has been sunk in the English Channel by a German submarine. The crew was saved and taken to Brest. The attack was made on Thursday. The Penfeld was a vessel of 794 tons and hailed from Brest. She was 195 feet long and thirty feet wide and was built in 1884.

Nine men have been landed at Kirkwall from the Aberdeen fishing steamer Chrysophrasus.

The crew of the Danish timber schooner Salvador, which was sunk by a submarine, have been landed at Lerwick, Scotland.

After ordering the schooner's crew into boats, the submarine set fire to the vessel and also shot away the stern with two shells. The crew had been adrift twelve hours when picked up by a trawler.

The Scotch fishing boats Edna May and Kathleen have been sunk by a German submarine off the Scotch coast. The crews were landed at Peterhead.

IMMENSE FORZE A MONTENERO PROSSIMA GRANDE BATTAGLIA

PARIGI, 5 Giugno.—Da notizie ricevute qui stammattina, provenienti da attendibili informazioni assunte a Roma, si rileva che una importante battaglia si e' iniziata tra le forze del generale Cadorna e gli Austriaci che difendono la via per Trieste. Il fronte di battaglia e' tra Montenero e Tolmino.

Le ultime notizie sono sempre favorevoli agli Italiani, i quali avanzano.

A Vienna si assicura che gli Austriaci hanno rioccupato le due importanti sommita' del Freuzberg, preso dagli Italiani giorni fa. Si tratta di una delle piu' alte montagne del Rhon, nota per il Monastero di Francescani, eretto sulla sua sommita'.

Le vicinanze sono piene di ricordi della guerra del 1866, quando i Bavaresi sconfissero i Prussiani. Ai visitatori, fino all'inizio della presente guerra, si mostravano i buchi che i proiettili lasciarono sui muri delle case.

GLI AUSTRIACI SI AMMASSANO.

Per Fermare L'avanzata Italiana.

ROMA, 4 Giugno.—Gli Italiani e gli Austriaci si preparano a sostenere forse la piu' grande battaglia della guerra presente. Si crede che si verifichera' infra due settimane, e sara' combattuta nei dintorni di Trieste ove gli Austriaci ammassano delle grandi forze.

Aiutati da formidabili fortificazioni, rese piu' terribili dai vantaggi naturali di quelle montagnose regioni, gli Austriaci si preparano a resistere disperatamente all'avanzata degli Italiani su Trieste.

Gli Italiani riconoscono che gli attacchi sostenuti fin ora sono stati di nessuna importanza, ma che una battaglia decisiva dovra' sostenersi fra breve, talche' fanno dei preparativi febbrili per assicurare la vittoria.

Frattanto la lotta continua, con leggeri scontri, per sostenere le posizioni conquistate.

IL RAPPORTO UFFICIALE DEL COMANDO ITALIANO.

Il Ministero della Guerra ha fatto pubblico il seguente bollettino. Nel fronte Tirolo-Trentino degli scontri insignificanti sono avvenuti.

Continuando le nostre operazioni contro Rovereto, abbiamo occupato Maiassano e Valmorbia nella Valle Arsa. La nebbia impedisce le operazioni delle nostre artiglierie nell' altipiano Asiago, ma abbiamo accertato che il nostro fuoco, oltre a mettere al silenzio i forti di Lucerna e Spitzverle, ha seriamente danneggiati quelli di Belvedere e Busaverle.

Nel fronte sulle Carniche, abbiamo annientati i fort idi Montecroce.

Sull' Isonzo, la nostra offensiva lungo Montenero e Tolmino, incontra delle gravi difficolta', sia per il terreno non favorevole, sia per le trincee formidabili degli Austriaci, i quali, con forze preponderanti, muniti di mitragliatrici ed artiglierie, possono infliggerci delle gravi perdite. Le nostre truppe combatterono tutto il giorno tre, con varia fortuna.

Le sommita' di Montenero sono nelle nostre mani. Le nostre perdite non furono rilevanti. La battaglia continua. Delle truppe fresche sono state avanzate al fronte per effettuare una decisione.

Il piu' grande segreto e' mantenuto all'Ufficio del Comando sull'ammassamento delle truppe per la prossima grande battaglia. La censura stabilita alla frontiera impedisce che si trasmettano i nomi degli ufficiali in commando e la quantita' delle truppe che da loro dipendono. La mobilizione pero' e' completa. Le truppe italiane sono fermamente convinte che vinceranno.

Il Ministro della Guerra ha ricevuto il rapporto del successo di un plotone di alpini, il quale, diretto da un sottotenente, riusci a conquistare una trincea che guarda valle d'Inferno, importantissima. Il sottotenente fu ferito durante l'assalto, ma continuo' a dirigere i suoi uomini fino a che la posizione non fu presa. Il Re Vittorio Emmanuele attacco' lui stesso al petto ferito del giovane ufficiale la medaglia al valore.

UN'OTTIMA RACCOLTA.

Il governo d'Itala ed il popolo si preparano a raccogliere un ottimo raccolto dalle campagne. Circa cinque milioni di acri di terra e' sotto produzione. Poiche' nelle condizioni ordinarie ben 2,200,000 contandini hanno atteso ai lavori del raccolto, quest 'anno il governo provvedera' con 10,000 macchine e con un paio di milioni di donne e ragazzi i quali prenderanno il posto dei loro parenti che si trovano in guerra.

RICHIEDONO UN COMPENSO PER DANNI.

Il Governo Tedesco, a mezzo della legazione Svizzera, ha fatto domanda a quello d'Italia che sia pagato un indennizzo aicittadini tedeschi che furono danneggiati nelle loro proprieta' negli ultimi moti di Milano.

GLI AUSTRIACI CONQUISTANO DUE VETTE.

VIENNA, 4 giugno.—Il Ministero della Guerra ha fatto pubblico il seguente bollettino:

"Nella frontiera tirolese nessun importante evento si e' verificato. Nella parte orientale del Kreupberg noi abbiamo conquistato due sommita' che gli Italiani avevano digia' occupato con grandi forze.

EROI ITALIANI ONORATI DAL RE

MILANO, 4 Giugno.—L'onorificenza accordata dal Re Vittorio al sottotenente Pinerolo ed al caporale Vico, che, di loro iniziativa, diressero i loro soldati ad imposessarsi d un'importante passo che innette alla Valle d'Inferno, e' una dimostrazione dell'ammirazione del Re all'ardore, all'entusiasmo e al coraggio eroico che i soldati italiani dimostrano ogni dove.

Non si deve immaginare che queste brave truppe abbiano semplicemente da camminare nel territorio austriaco. In molti casi cio' significa una lotta terribile e feroce. Gli uomini che sono stati decorati dal Re hanno esposto la loro vita una dozzina di volte. La gravita' del combattimento si puo' giudicare dal fatto che la piccola pattuglia che assunse spontaneamente tale movimento lascio' sul posto 25 austriaci uccisi.

Liner Adriatic Escapes Submarine

LONDON, June 5.—The Adriatic's passengers, arriving in London report sighting a submarine. The ship had gone full speed while nearing Queenstown, taking a zigzag course, and then some one saw a black object about a mile away which was immediately taken to be a submarine. Rumors immediately spread that the ship was being chased. Consequently a majority of the passengers refused to go to bed, donning life belts and remaining on deck throughout the night. Lifeboats were lowered immediately the vessel approached the war zone.

Attack Government In Japanese House

TOKIO, June 5.—Another attack against the Japanese government was begun by the opposition party in the House of Representatives today. A resolution expressing lack of confidence in Viscount Kanetake Oura, Minister of the Interior, was introduced.

ITALIANS SILENCE AUSTRIAN FORTS

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, June 5.—The hardest fighting of the Austro-Italian war is in progress around Monte Nero, north of the Isonzo River, between Talmein and Caporetto. Although the summit is in possession of the Italians, the Austrians are still holding strong positions, and Lieutenant-General Cadorna, chief of the Italian general staff, is pouring fresh troops and artillery into the battle.

Artillery duels are raging in the Alps on the Friuli frontier in spite of the thick fog which makes accurate shooting very difficult. One of the extraordinary features of the war has proved the superiority of the Italian guns over the Austrian artillery. The Austrian forts of Luzerna and Spitzverle have both been silenced. These were among the Austrian defensive works defending the roads to Trent and were constructed by the most efficient military engineers in Europe at the cost of many millions of dollars.

Despite the increasing resistance of the Austrians, the Italians continue to make progress in every direction. On the Lake Grada, the Italian army of invasion in Trent has occupied Mattasone and Val Morbia.

In the Carnic Alps the Italians are fighting to open up the way to Tolmein. In spite of rains, which have turned the mountain streams to torrents, and the precipitous roads which the troops have to traverse, the Italians have made exceptional progress, the artillery keeping pace with the infantry.

A papal decree has just been issued at the Vatican instituting the new post of "Military Bishop." His duties will be to appoint chaplains for the land and sea forces, bless the flags of the armies and direct the spiritual organizations during the war. The first "Military Bishop" is Monsignor Angelo Bartolomassi, an Italian.

The Austrians are reported shifting artillery and troops from the Eastern front for use against the Italians. Many troop trains bearing infantry guns and ammunition have arrived at Laibach, between forty and forty-five miles northeast of Trieste.

The Austrians, it is said, are running short of ammunition in the southwestern theatre of war, and their troops at some places are becoming mutinous.

The Austrians have cut off telephonic and telegraphic communication with Switzerland. They are reported to have evacutated Rovereto, after practically destroying the city. Rovereto is fifteen miles south of Trent. It was officially announced several days ago that the Italians had captured the heights north of Ala, from which they could dominate the city with their guns.

CHARGES YOUNG BOSTON BOYS ARE LURED INTO BRITISH ARMY

tion of appeals received by him from mothers and relatives of boys in Charlestown, East Boston, Roxbury, Dorchester and other parts of Boston to use every possible influence to secure the release of the boys who unwittingly or unwillingly enlisted in the British army.

RUSHED INTO ARMY.

Congressman Tague announced today that there are over fifty boys whose cases have reached his attention who have sailed from Boston under United States shipping laws, only to wind up in the British army.

Before the sailing of the Cambrian, he said, he had been unable to secure any evidence that the recruiting was part of an organized system, or that any undue influence was being used. On account of the many cases that had been called to his attention, however, he was suspicious of the Cambrian and took every precaution to make certain of his charges before reaching definite conclusions.

"Even now," he said, "I am loth to believe that such a condition of affairs can actually exist at our very doors. Yet, the wholesale shipment of these boys, immature mentally, if not physically, on the Cambrian, indicates at least some irregularity," the Congressman said today.

"I have the names of the fifteen boys who were taken out on the Cambrian. Mind you, I am not charging anyone with anything, but to say the least it is a matter for investigation in these days of naval activity by the German submarines, that British recruiting officers should have known when and where to expect certain ships and to meet them and begin their work of enlisting before the ships had even docked.

"Stranger yet is the fact that even though the United States Consul General had been cabled to intercept some fifteen of the boys from the Cambrian and see that they were returned, he should find that they had already been enlisted, taken off the Cambrian, and sent post haste to recruiting stations.

RETURNS DOZEN BOYS.

"Of course, it is reasonable to believe that these boys were shipped under assumed names when they were accepted aboard the ships as caretakers for horses, and it is also reasonable to believe that at least some of them were guilty of falsehoods in declaring their ages to recruiting sergeants, but it is not reasonable to suppose that some of the lads, who are absent from home, shipped with the express purpose of enlisting in the British service.

"I have succeeded in returning to their anxious relatives about a dozen boys who went abroad prior to May 8, and a significant phase of their return was that none of them would discuss their trips or commit themselves in any way.

"It is impossible at this time to state with any degree of accuracy how these boys, hailing from different sections of the city, should have learned that the position of caretaker of horses aboard ship was open to them.

SUSPECTS INDUCEMENTS.

"I am strongly inclined to believe that some inducement was held out to them by some person or persons receiving recompense for securing the services of young Americans.

"It was the pathetic appeals of the parents of some of these boys that moved me to action," declared Congressman Tague. "I immediately reported the cases aboard the Cambrian to the State Department and received the following reply from Secretary Bryan after I had returned to Boston, a couple of weeks ago, under the date of May 28.

"'Referring to the department's letter of May 10, 1915, relative to the welfare of Patrick Dennehy, the fifteen-year-old boy who shipped on May 3 on the steamship Cambrian, bound for London, I have the honor to inform you that the following telegram has been received from the American Consul General at that capital:

"'On arrival steamer Cambrian, recruiting sergeant given opportunity to go aboard and enlisted Patrick Dennehy and fourteen others, thus frustrating arrangements theretofore made for his return. Am asking War Department for his immediate discharge as contrary to agreement with Board of Trade covering compliance with United States shipping laws and return of horse guards to ports of departure. The department will keep you apprised of the progress of this matter.'"

CLERKS OF NEW HAVEN MAY STRIKE

That the clerks in the employ of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the New England Steamship Company, who are members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks, are on the point of striking, was learned today.

A strike ballot setting forth the grievances of the Brotherhood and the negotiations thereon was mailed to every male and female in the union on May 3 by the joint board of adjustment, comprising members of the railroad committee and of the steamship committee.

It was learned today that the vote has been tabulated and that 98 per cent. of the 2,000 members have voted to strike.

Messrs. Kilday and Reeves, representing the Federal Commission of Conciliation, have been negotiating with the railroad management and the Brotherhood representatives, seeking to avert a tie-up of the road, but no agreement yet has been reached. The conciliators are now in Washington and will return to New Haven on Tuesday to resume negotiations.

SITUATION ACUTE.

A person who is in touch with the situation said today that it is very acute. He added:

"The negotiations which have been pending for the past four weeks during which time the Federal Commission of Conciliation has been actively engaged trying to bring about a satisfactory adjustment, rested today over Sunday with a proposition under consideration which meets with the entire approval of the management of the road, the general chairmen representing the engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and telegraphers, and the representatives of the federal commission. The proposition may be submitted to the clerks for a referendum vote, as such a desire has been expressed."

There are three specific grievances and a number of incidental ones, which it is claimed by the clerks are in violation of the agreements entered into by the road and by the clerks' organization on January 11, 1913, and June 2, 1913.

BOSTON GRIEVANCES.

It is claimed that W. H. Harrington acted as foreman at No. 5 freight house in Boston from January 11 to July 3, 1913, but was denied the pay of foreman and only given the pay of checking clerk. The appointment of a foreman at freight house No. 6 in Boston is the basis of the second grievance. It is claimed it was assigned to a junior applicant over other bidders fully as competent and with much longer service records.

The case of John L. May, discharged for alleged insubordination by Agent C. G. Fisher at Hartford, is the third grievance.

Red Cross War Fund.

F. L. Higginson, Jr., treasurer Massachusetts branch American Red Cross, reports that $134,933.65 has been subscribed.

Dog Chases Cat; Falls 20 Feet and Is Injured

John F. Williams, a night watchman at No. 36 Broad street, has lost his dog. He reported to the police.

"What'dye mean, you lost your dog?" asked the skeptical sergeant. Williams explained that the dog was his inseparable companion during the long vigils of the night, and once saved his life from burglars. When last seen the dog was chasing a cat which disappeared into the building occupied as the old custom house stables.

Patrolman Cairns was detailed to investigate and the dog was found seriously injured in the basement of the stables. From his position it was decided that in jumping after the cat the dog had fallen a distance of about twenty feet. The cat escaped.

One Man Killed, Four Hurt in Auto Accident

WESTFIELD, June 5.—One man was killed and four were injured when the front wheels of an automobile buckled in a car track in the village of Russell early today.

The dead man is Frank Yarmesky, twenty-eight years old, who leaves a wife and family.

The injured are William Strmiste, owner and driver of the auto; his brother, Charles Strmiste; Oldrich Rehor and his brother, Charles Rehor. All are Bohemians of Westfield.

The accident happened when the young men were returning from a dance in Huntington. In turning out to pass another automobile the front wheels gave out and the machine, which was going at full speed, turned around, throwing its occupants to the ground.

Frank Yarmesky struck on his head and was instantly killed. The others, all more or less injured, were brought to Westfield in an automobile. The occupants of the other auto, which was also going at full speed, were unaware of the accident and did not stop.

BELMONT'S BRIDE TO WEAR "MADE IN U. S. A." GOWN

Recent photograph of Miss Margaret F. Andrews, who is to marry Morgan Belmont. She is seen here with four of her pets.

©BY UNDERWOOD AND UNDERWOOD

Miss Margaret F. Andrews, whose wedding to Morgan Belmont promises to be "the event" of the season at Newport, will wear a trousseau "made in America," from slippers to veil, she announced to her friends who quizzed her about her plans at the dog show at Mineola, L. I., where she had several notable entries.

She declared that she had always taken it for granted that she would acquire all the obvious and intimate garments that make up the apparel for the momentous ceremony in Europe. But since the war abroad has called on all patriotic folk to encourage home industries, "the dress" and all the accessories would really have to be "made in U. S. A."

Miss Andrews has a wide acquaintance in Boston and in Newport has been known as the "rage of the set." She has undertaken every sort of thrill from speeding to aeronautics. When she was but ten years old she was thrown from her horse, dragged by the stirrup and nearly killed, only to appear a day or so afterward riding the same fractious mount.

She is a devout Catholic. She was confirmed in Rome by Pope Pius in 1911, when she was seventeen years. The wedding is scheduled to take place after the Newport horse show at Rocky Hall, the Andrews villa.

Same Wagon, Same Horses, in Same Hole

For the second time in two days the same wagon, with the same horses and same driver, broke through the subway planking on the same spot in the same Dewey square with the same results.

The team is a four-horse hitch driven by James Barry and owned by the Boston Freight and Transportation Company. It was loaded with six tons of sheet tin, a load similar to the one of the previous accident.

In passing over the subway excavation the wagon repeated its performance of two days ago by sinking through the planking up to the hub. The accident happened where the car tracks come together opposite the South Station, and immediately lines of cars were tied in all directions.

When the crash came a score of Italian laborers at work underneath swarmed to the surface, fearing the heavy wagon was about to crush them, but they were unhurt and were speedily put to work unloading the dray. No one was hurt and there was no damage.

The initial performance on the same stage with the same cast occurred at 5:30 Thursday afternoon.

SAYS WALSH VETO SERVES PEOPLE

Governor Walsh's vetoes of the New Haven validation and mortgage bond bills were publicly commended by Representative Edward F. McLaughlin of Boston. Mr. McLaughlin, a fearless and conscientious legislator, is the titular leader of the Democratic forces in the House of Representatives. The titular leader is generally regarded to be the spokesman of the Governor on matters of legislative policy in the lower branch of the Legislature. It was said that Representative McLaughlin was in constant conference with the Governor during the pendency of the New Haven legislation and that he was thoroughly familiar with the Governor's attitude at all times.

By EDWARD F. M'LAUGHLIN.

The vetoes by Governor Walsh of the New Haven validating bill, so-called, and the mortgage bond bill, which, though a general act, was designed to serve principally the New Haven Railroad, are striking manifestations of the integrity, the courage and the determination of our chief executive.

They served notice upon the people in no uncertain terms of the indisputable fact that David I. Walsh is at all times their Governor, that he is at all times keenly alive to the best interests of all the people.

The vetoes at the same time served notice upon the corporate interests that they may expect favors only when such favors are not inimical to the welfare of the people.

By a propaganda that has assumed national significance, indicating that it is sponsored by all the railroads in their community of interests, effort is being made to secure further increases of financial powers and further increases of transportation rates through the medium of fictitious values, known in railroad parlance as "The Reproduction Theory" or "Unearned Increment."

WOULD INCREASE RATES.

In other words, the railroads are attempting to bring forward a theoretical value of their properties—some of which properties were given to them outright by nation, State and municipalities—as a basis on which to impose higher rates of transportation upon the business man and upon every man, woman and child who use the railroads.

President Wilson has declared himself against this program. Massachusetts, as is well known, is frequently cited as enacting laws which guide the course of other States. In Massachusetts the railroads, or at least the majority party in the State Legislature, sought to inaugurate this program. The program was contained in the bills passed by the Legislature and sent on to the Governor for his signature in the closing hours of the present session.

But, fortunately for the State, the man whose signature was necessary before the law could become operative, was a Democratic Governor, David I. Walsh. He not only withheld his signature, but he sent the bills back to the Legislature with a message of disapproval that is now regarded as a remarkable document of State.

When the people realize the importance of his vetoes, they will then realize how much they owe to his courage and his stern determination. Then will they know that he alone saved them from a vicious principle that was disgusting if it was not dishonest. In view of the fact that the program was part of a national propaganda, his service was rendered not alone to the people of Massachusetts but to the people of the nation.

Governor Walsh demanded legislation that would give the Public Service Commission, the representatives of the State and people, undisputed authority to inquire into the finances of the railroad. He demanded the enactment of legislation, if any legislation were to be passed, which would keep the railroads subordinate to the established railroad policy of the State. Finding that the bills did not comply with those requirements, he vetoed them.

At some time in the future it will be said by those gentlemen in public life who would serve the corporations rather than the people, that the Governor vetoed the bills for a political purpose. To correct such statements before they can be issued, let me briefly explain the course of the bills in the Legislature.

FAVORED 'CLEAN' LEGISLATION.

The Governor stood committed to the bills recommended by the Public Service Commission. When those bills came into the House of Representatives in the form indorsed by the commission and approved by the Governor, we Democrats who constitute the minority party voted for them.

The bills subsequently went into a Committee on Conference. Changes were there made in the bills, changes of a vicious nature. When the bills came back to the House in that form we voted against them. Despite our opposition the bills were passed in that form. They were sent to the Governor in that form. He promptly vetoed them.

HUNDREDS STARVING IN MEXICO

The following graphic uncensored statement of actual conditions in Mexico City was received by mail from an American resident. The censorship on telegraph matter is prohibitive.

MEXICO CITY, May 23.—The terrors in revolution-ridden Mexico City have reached a climax in the unprecedented famine. The scarcity of food here is at a stage unequalled in the world, except in ravaged Poland.

The average daily deaths from starvation have jumped from scores to hundreds since the first week in May. It is estimated by the Ayuntamiento—the town council—that 500 persons are dying every day from hunger and from causes immediately superinduced by lack of food.

It is predicted by the Ayuntamiento that within two weeks, unless communication is established with the producing States, the daily deaths due to lack of food will reach 1,000.

(This estimate was made twelve days ago. Communication has not been established.)

SUPPLIES EXHAUSTED.

The population of Mexico City is approximately 500,000. If all the corn, frijol, rice, cereals and other foodstuffs secreted in the cellars by Spanish merchants were commandeered tomorrow for starving women and children of the peon and middle classes, it is doubtful if each family would receive enough rations to last them seventy-two hours.

Supplies in the city are exhausted because the so-called armies which possess all the lines of communication to the states of Michoacan, Queretaro and Vera Cruz, confiscate all incoming foodstuffs.

The indifference of some higher officials is exemplified by an appropriation just made of 500,000 pesos to send a commission to Washington on a junket, while only 50,000 pesos was appropriated to relieve the starving thousands.

Since the food situation became acute the number of beggars under foot has increased a hundred fold. Every doorway is littered with them. They cluster like flies in front of clubs and the scanty restaurants, swarming around the lucky with their pitiful appeals for just a bite of bread.

The majority of the beggars are little mothers, so shrivelled with hunger that their skins look like cracked leather. Their clothes are rags; they show their breasts unashamed. They clutch for money, food—anything, as ravenously as street dogs grab a thrown bone. Here they have literally taken the place of the street dogs, for they have long since eaten the dogs.

Then there are the cripples, which the revolution produced so numerously in every city, town or puebla. They crawl about in shreds of clothing, and when you step around or over them, thrust at you stumps of arms and whine to you by the love you bear the Virgin of Guadalupe to give them food or centavos.

And in every street in the central part of Mexico roam packs of starving, half-naked, incredibly filthy children, who are forever darting in and out of throngs crying to the skies for something to eat.

BODIES CARTED AWAY.

When the starving peons are no longer able to shuffle about the city plucking you by the sleeves, entreating alms, they crawl into doorways—half a dozen huddled together like dogs—and in the morning the city refuse carts come along, pick up their bodies and take them away.

Twice this week starving women swarmed into the Chamber of Deputies, where the delegates to the Soberana convention (the sovereign convention) were drawing a new constitution and receiving from the depleted treasury fifty pesos a day for their extraordinary volubility.

The convention appropriates half a million pesos for sending a commission to Washington to ask President Wilson to recognize it as "the government" and 50,000 pesos for purchasing cereals to relieve the starvation in Mexico City.

When by bribe or influence a carload of corn is started from Toluca for Mexico City, the chances are hardly one in a hundred that it reaches the capital.

Eleven carloads of corn that President Garza confiscated yesterday from the Zapatista general Antonio Navarro's brigade were at once carted to the Palacio Mineria in the calle Tacuba and there distributed to the populace.

More than 6,000 gaunt women swarmed in front of the stately building. The distribution lasted all the morning and afternoon.

During that time precisely 266 women dropped to the pavement from exhaustion due to hunger. After the Red Cross and White Cross Hospitals were filled, it became necessary to transform the nearby Edificio Decommunicaciones into a relief hospital.

The spectacle of the wailing mothers—most of the women carried babies in their arms—before the food station was the most terrible of its kind known in Mexico City.

they lined up four abreast around four blocks.

But as soon as the distribution of the maize got under way they broke for the entrance of the Palacio Mineria, toppled over the score of gendarmes assigned to herd them, broke down the iron gates of the Palacio and then ran riotously through the building.

The precious corn has been spilled on every stairway and even on the sidewalks, where it was scrambled for as if it were pennies, before a couple of hundred picked men of the Brigada Gonzales Garza could form the famished women into semblances of lines once more.

There is still corn in Toluca, parts of the State of Mexico and in remoter Michoacan, but only the military ability of General Frederick Funston or some other American general could devise a way of bringing it to famine-stricken Mexico City.

URGES PUNISHMENT.

"Let the assembly decree exemplary punishment," urged President Roque Gonzales Garza before the convention last evening. "Let the inexorable justice rise against those chiefs who, without scruple and without conscience, at the very gates of this city, snatch from the poor, from the Indian, the cargo of corn that he carries and then take it away from him in order to sell it themselves."

By diligent search among the warehouses of the commission merchants, the charity commission within 24 hours, obtained corn sufficient to give to 20,000 people two kilos a day for the next six days.

This supply and a few carloads of corn which General Garza has commandeered from the Zapatistas, contain practically all the food the impoverished people may expect to see until communications with the food districts are opened up.

WINCHESTER FOLK ALL GO TO TOWN BREAKFAST

Winchester sat down to its thirteenth annual "town breakfast" at nineteen long tables in the town hall, 1,600 people having breakfast between 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning.

The breakfast was given under the auspices of the Winchester Visiting Nurses' Association. The proceeds go toward a fund for the erection of a Winchester hospital.

An orchestra discoursed sweet music during the repast. Members of the association served as waitresses. And the amount of provender consumed reads like the commissary list of the German army. Observe.

100 dozen eggs.
25 hams.
20 pots of beans.
3000 rolls.
30 loaves of brown bread.
100 dozen doughnuts.
24 quarts of pickles.
45 gallons of cream.
800 bananas.
8 crates of strawberries.
AND
incidentals beyond number.

The committee on arrangements included Mrs. Mott A. Cummings, Miss Alice Richardson, Mrs. Preston Pond, Mrs. Fred A. Parsley, Mrs. Charles A. Lane, Mrs. George S. Littlefield, Mrs. Frank M. White, Mrs. William I. Palmer and Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn.

20,000 MEXICANS FED BY RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, June 5.—More than 20,000 hungry persons already have been fed from the two carloads of Red Cross provisions which have reached Monterey, Consul-General Hanna today reported to the State Department.

Corn was supplied to more than 7,000 persons yesterday at the American Hospital. Generals Davila, Zertuche and Santos requested Hanna to thank President Wilson and the Red Cross for the supplies on behalf of the needy people of Monterey and vicinity.

Hanna sent an urgent appeal to the American people to contribute liberally to help the people of northern Mexico now. He reported that corn, beans and rice are needed in quantity and at once.

The consul-general urged that the American people save the lives of the poor Mexicans, most of whom are in no way responsible for their destitute condition.

PLANS UNDER WAY.

The administration and the Red Cross today went ahead with their plans to get food to the starving people in Mexico, while waiting for official word from the several leaders there as to what they propose to do about President Wilson's warning to stop fighting.

Unofficial advices reaching Washington have indicated that both Carranza and Villa would reply to the Chief Executive in a friendly spirit, although persons close to the leader of the North assert that he would resist with force of arms entrance into Mexico of United States troops should this be necessary to enforce the President's demands.

The State Department was informed officially today of the delivery of President Wilson's note of Wednesday to President Garza of the Convention government in Mexico City, and to General Carranza.

General Villa, who is absent from his headquarters, has not yet acknowledged receipt of the text. A messenger will be dispatched from Mexico City to Cuernavaca with a copy of the note for General Zapata.

The War Department has ordered army depots along the Mexican border to receive supplies sent there for transportation into Mexico, but beyond this the military forces will not go for the present.

RED CROSS DISTRIBUTION.

The actual distribution of the food among the starving Mexicans will be left entirely to the Red Cross.

Plans thus far made provide that S. P. Morris, acting national director of the Red Cross, will sail from New York next Thursday for Vera Cruz. He will supervise as far as possible the Red Cross activities in central Mexico, and make his headquarters at Vera Cruz. The work on the border will be directed by Brigadier-General Devol, general manager of the Red Cross organization. He will be assisted by all the consular officers in the section of Mexico in his jurisdiction.

The State Department still is trying to neutralize the railroad from Mexico City to Vera Cruz and get a train to carry Americans and other foreigners from the capital to the seaport, who do not join the horseback and automobile caravan to leave the Mexican capital next week under the leadership of British diplomatic representatives there.

Harvard Appeal to Help France

Workers, not pleasure seekers, is what the ambulance driving corps in France are seeking, says John P. Brown, Harvard graduate, who writes from Ypres, Belgium, asking that Harvard men offer their services abroad as the need of drivers at present is very great.

"And above all the need is for men who will come with a serious purpose to help France," says Brown. "Those who would plan a three months' outing had best stay at home; the tourist spirit has already cause grave trouble over here."

$3,000 Seizure in Revere Drug Raid

Gossip led to the $3,000 seizure at Revere of opium and other narcotics by the Revere police and the arrest of Michael Cligman on the charge of having drugs in his possession. It was the biggest drug raid in the history of the beach.

The authorities claim Cligman has been conducting a distributing agency since the federal lid was clamped down to check the national drug evil.

First Portia in East Boston Court

For the first time in the history of the East Boston Court, a woman lawyer appeared as prosecutor when Miss Rosamond H. Levy, associated with Miss Mabel R. Sonnabend as Levy & Sonnabend, appeared as representative for Hyman Sarotta, who is prosecuting Louis Landau for concealing leased property. The case was continued until next Saturday.

Landau is alleged to have concealed a horse and wagon of Sarotta's. In central court he appealed from a sentence of one year for larceny.

WILSON REPLY TO GERMANY WILL OPEN DOOR TO PARLEY

Gerhard, who sailed for Berlin as the personal envoy of Count Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, took with him the views of the ambassador as the probable basis on which these negotiations can be conducted.

The decision to send Mr. Gerhard to Germany was made at the conference between President Wilson and the ambassador on Wednesday.

This is stated on the highest authority. It is supported by two important developments:

1—The receipt of information at the State Department that the United States if on friendly terms with all belligerents is likely to be called on within three months to undertake the delicate task of bringing about peace.

2—The receipt by the State Department of a mollifying note from Germany on the Gulflight case, in which ample apologies are made for the incident and full assurance given that Germany has no intention of injuring American vessels or property.

From what may be regarded as a well-informed source, the following is learned as to the points in the new note:

POINTS IN NEW NOTE.

1—That the President has re-stated the position he took in his first note to Germany in which he appeals to international law and to the humanities to induce Germany to safeguard the lives of Americans and other noncombatants on neutral vessels and generally on unarmed vessels.

2—That the United States regards it still as practically impossible that a submarine can visit and search any merchantman as required by international law and that Germany is still held strictly accountable to the United States for the loss of American lives through violation of that law.

3—That the Lusitania was neither armed, in fact, nor could she be construed to be under the rules of international law, written or unwritten.

4—It is intimated to Germany that this government would consider any suggestions she may have tending to show or prove that Germany's present submarine operations can be carried out with due regard to international law.

5—The United States views with satisfaction the amends offered in the cases of the Gulflight and the Cushing.

THE GULFLIGHT NOTE.

It is said the formal note of apology from the German Foreign Office in the case of the Gulflight and the Cushing had considerable effect upon the final suggestions as to the language of the document.

Officials say this note was received in due time for the cabinet meeting. In fact, one of the officials said a supreme effort had been made by Germany to get the Gulflight note to this government that it might be available for discussion at the cabinet meeting.

It was noted that Germany had taken great pains to indicate all through the Gulflight note that she had special regard for American opinion and in two specific parts of the note had indicated that the acts of aggression would not have been committed if the German submarine commander had known positively that he was attacking an American vessel.

EARLY PEACE PARLEY.

The plain implication from this note, officials say, is that Germany is very anxious to forestall any of the strong and violent phrases that were alleged to be in the President's note. It is pointed out that in the Gulflight note Germany indicates in advance of the forthcoming note of the President that she is endeavoring to conduct a submarine warfare so far as this government and its people are concerned, with due regard for international law obligations.

The German reply to the President's note will not be formulated until Mr. Gerhard has arrived in Berlin and has made his statement of the situation to the foreign office.

The discovery today that the likelihood of early peace negotiations has become an element in the situation is regarded as of immense importance.

There have been rumors from time to time that there existed a disposition on the part of one or more of the belligerents to make peace, but today was the first time that an official in a position to know has admitted that he had more than mere opinion to go on when he said that this government may be called on within three months to sound out the nations now at war.

SECOND CONTEST COUNT JUNE 13

Tomorrow the last of the big 10-vote coupons in Series "E" will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The next vote standing, which will include all votes polled in Series "A," "B" and "C," will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN one week from tomorrow, June 13.

The entire contest comes to a close in twenty-eight days. It's a case of "full steam ahead" from now until the finish.

TIMES VICTORIOUS IN BRITISH SUIT

LONDON, June 5.—The London Times has won the suit brought against it by the government under the "Defence of the Realm Act," for the publication of a letter stating that the last reserves in France had been called out.

The suit was dismissed today, the Times emerging victorious. The government's suit was the latest chapter in a controversy that dated back to the beginning of the war, between the government and the Times.

The paper was prosecuted for printing a letter from Major Richardson, stating that the French were sending raw boys to the front. The government did not deny the truth of this statement, but Mathias Bodkin, K. C., who prosecuted the case, said:

"This statement, whether true or false, is of a mischievous character, tending to assist the enemy with information it contained, and to make them consider that the French forces had reached their limits, thus bringing about in the Germans a feeling of confidence, and among the French and British a feeling of depression."

Major Richardson also said in his letter that there was danger the French would weary of the war before Winter unless England resorted to conscription. The government took exception to this statement. The government said France had complained of the publication of the letter.

Bodkin, counsel in the case, said the Times had been warned to be careful what it printed.

The story of the Times' fight with the government goes back to the beginning, when the Times insisted that Lord Kitchener be appointed War Minister.

After the British disaster at Mons, the Times printed a dispatch describing the British defeat.

The government thereupon made the censorship more rigid, against the Times' protests.

When English troops were being shifted to France the Times printed the fact. Kitchener sent for a responsible editor and warned him that similar publications in the future would mean that he, the editor, would be shot within twenty-four hours.

Some weeks ago the Times printed a letter from a guest of General French, showing how British lives were being sacrificed, because the British were being supplied with shrapnel instead of high explosive shells.

This letter was about to become the subject of Parliamentary debate when Premier Asquith, by a personal appeal and a promise to form a coalition cabinet, averted the crisis.

JAMES B. CONNOLLY WRITES GREAT STORY FOR AMERICAN

James B. Connolly, the Boston author of sea tales, whose story of Gloucester and the Grand Banks won a $2,500 prize recently in a short story contest, has contributed to the magazine which will accompany your Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow one of the most powerful stories he has ever written.

It is not a sea tale, but it is the story of the strange events that occur on an immigrant train between Paris and Havre on a certain Summer night. It concerns a Sicilian—bootblack and sponge fisherman—an American college man, two women and a third man.

And it has those two vital elements of the story which aspires to the highest rank, mystery, and a surprise at the end.

Mr. Connolly has surpassed himself in the story; and he has proved that his fame has other foundation than his skill in depicting the battlers of the Banks.

The story is called "Quilten." Here is the way it begins:

When at college, he was the one chap that we always felt we could lay our money on. To do everything that Quilten did, in the set, stern way he did them, must have been with him a gift, an inheritance; so we reasoned.

At times I thought I could detect in Quilten a wavering from the ancestral rigidity. I had in mind a gleam in his eyes when he was watching a little game of penny-ante; to which the crowd said Hush! when I spoke of it. Quilten cleaving his grandfather with a meat-axe or boiling his bony old grandmother in oil—he looked as if such things might be possible. But Quilten sitting into a game of chance—it was for me to begin to restrain my wild fancies.

I was as friendly as the next with Quilten at college; but he wasn't the sort the fellows went out of their way to keep track of, and so where he went to from college I did not know. But some years later, I was one hot afternoon in a ticket agency in Paris trying to make the clerk understand that although I wanted a first-class passage on the steamer—that is, from Havre to New York—I wanted, not a first-class, but a third-class train ticket from Paris to Havre.

The clerk thought I was trying to save the difference in fares and he patiently explained again that the saloon passage to New York included also a first-class train fare from Paris to Havre. Did I not comprehend? All the while I was articulating over and over to the clerk that I comprehended, but would he please give me what I asked for, I was aware of some one behind me taking in every word I said, and so when at last I was given the tickets I wanted, I turned to see who he might be. It was Quilten.

HEARTY GREETING.

I was gladder than ever I would have thought to see him. We shook hand, and he said: "Gad, but I'm glad to see you too, Hare!" and he said it so heartily, with such a change from his old petrified bow and frozen "I'm quite well, thank you, and how do you do?" that I gave him another look over.

His appearance was pretty much the same, perhaps not quite so stiff in bearing, but still super-correctly dressed and still a reminiscence of the manner of the man who always expects to be spoken to first. But he did look more human than of old.

"Why are you taking that steerage train to Havre?" was his first question after our greetings.

I told him why—to make sketches of the immigrants from south and eastern Europe who would be sure to be on the train. "And also," I added, "I am taking that train because of Chiliano Joe."

"Chiliano Joe? What about him?"

His curiosity was so real that I led the way to a bench to tell at ease the history of Joe Baldini, the young Italian that I knew first in New York—an Italian, I say, though he never spoke of himself so. "I am S'ciliano," he would say, thumping his chest; and Chiliano Joe, as we boys pronounced it, was what we all came to call him.

The great Sicilian virtue, according to Joe, was to be able to settle your own quarrels. Which possibly was so, although when I came to know Sicily later—the Sicily of the coast, I mean—I never felt any less safe there than I did in the United States; but it is good to hear a man argue his case with enthusiasm.

Which Joe could do. There were the policemen in New York, for instance. For them to be standing on crowded crossings and save old women and fat men from being run over, that was a good business—O yes! But for so many other things—O no! In Sicily strong men settled their own quarrels in their own way. Joe was himself a strong man; a boxer, a wrestler, a phenomenal swimmer, a short, thickset young fellow, so superbly muscled that of a day when business was dull he would quite often call around and pose for me as Hercules.

WENT TO WAR.

Joe was a bootblack, who gradually acquired a series of shoe-shining stands of a kind where the public are invited to roost up on elevated chairs, set their feet on brass-bound foot-molds, and stare at themselves in fly-specked mirrors while a row of boys chattering foreign idiom sawed grimy cloths across the public insteps.

Joe was a hard-working honest youth, who prospered. After ten years or so he sold out his little syndicate of shoe stands and sailed to Sicily to be married to a girl whose photograph he had been carrying inside his breast pocket for four years that I knew of.

I looked to see him back in New York before the hot weather, but the war with Turkey was on, and Joe had run off to America without serving his conscription. He was drafted, the last I heard of him in New York, to fight the Turks in Morocco. A few months after that, being in Italy—in Naples—I thought to take a run down the coast to the seaport of Palermo, which was where Joe's people lived, and there I was one morning, watching a deck load of sick and wounded soldiers disembarking, when a yellow skeleton from among them stopped and stared at me. I stared at him, but until he spoke I did not know him. It was Joe, and he had been wounded; although to be wounded, as he began to tell me right away, was p-s-s-s-t- nothing. But the cholera that a man acquired in Africa—that was something which did not depart from a man in one day, or one week, or one month—no, no.

I supported Joe to the carriage of Old Carlo, my regular veturrino, who it developed was an old friend of Joe's also. While Carlo and I were stowing Joe in Carlo's vehicle, Joe went on to tell us how happy he was to be out of the war, out of the hospital, discharged of the army, and home to his wife once more.

"SNAKE OF A MAN."

Carlo, shaking his head and muttering something which I could not make out, gave the whip to what passed for a horse in Palermo, and drove off with Joe. Later, Carlo told me what had happened while Joe was fighting in Africa. There was a man, a snake of a man—such men exist, it is true, God only knows for what purpose—and Joe's wife was very beautiful, but also very young and—well, weak, as women, otherwise all that an honest man might desire, are sometimes. Carlo rambled on until he told how she had eventually repented. But the rumor of Joe's homecoming must have frightened her, and she had run off. And next day the man had gone also.

For a week or two after Joe came home he might as well have been back in the hospital in Morocco. Then a letter had come to him and he began to mend, and another letter had come, and one morning he jumped aboard the steamer to Naples, leaving only a word with Old Carlo for me, his old American friend, that he might hunt me up at my old pension in Paris, if I stopped there on my way home.

"No more did I see or hear of him until this very morning." So I concluded to Quilten, who had listened with an interest which convinced me that I was a good story-teller or he a good actor. "A telephone call came for me at the pension. It was Joe pouring out his story to me, sometimes Americanese, sometimes in Sicilian patois, of how he had chased his enemy to Napoli, to Geneva, to Milano and now to Paris, where he was to leave that night by midnight third class to Havre, so he had learned, and by next day's steamer to New York. So there's Joe's story—Chiliano Joe who will be on the train tonight."

"Poor Joe!" said Quilten.

EXPECTED BRIGANDS.

"Poor Joe—yes, with his notions of ancestral standards—when I looked his people up I half expected to find a lot of wild brigands. Instead, I found his father the quietest, gentlest old sponge fisherman ever you saw, Quilten. And Joe was to have been a sponge fisherman; and a great one he would have been, for no boy in all Palermo Harbor could dive deeper or stay longer under water than Joe. And Joe's father preached the desirability of sponge fishing—an honest, though sometimes drudgesome occupation—morning, noon and night; but there was an ancient grandfather of Joe's who had come originally from the high hills of Sicily, and he had a tongue of flame."

"And ten words from him, thrown casually in from his corner by the fire-place, would more than offset a week of preaching by Joe's father."

"You guessed that right, Quilten—the old fellow did sit in the corner by the chimney. But now—?"

"It must be a saving instinct in us," interrupted Quilten, "which prompts them to oppose those who would force us into a groove. If you don't object, Hare, I will go with you."

"Good Lord, Quilten! what do you want to travel with immigrants on a night train for?"

"Why," he said, after a pause, "the varied types should interest me, and besides there is"—he smiled—"there is also Chiliano Joe."

That night we were passed, the pair of us submerged in a caravan of strange peoples, through a gate, onto a long platform and halted abreast of a train of stubby, low-roofed, grimy cars. Quilten almost bolted at sight of the cars.

PUSHED ON TRAIN.

"Smell 'em, Hare, smell!" he shouted.

I refused to smell—I could smell without smelling. "Get aboard," I urged, "get aboard. A pair of bebuttoned and bebraided officials beseech you to get aboard."

"I will get aboard when I get ready," said Quilten. "To think that human beings—"

He got that far, his arms waving over his head, when "M'sieur, m'sieur!" came bouncing up two guards, and grabbed him and threw him through the door of the nearest compartment.

"You—you—you bureaucrats!" he yelled, his disheveled head stuck through the door of the nearest compartment window. "Because we are not traveling first class, because—"

But the train was already moving past a lot of other minor officials who looked as though they were also relieved to be rid of us, past them and past a train of brightly-lit sleeping cars where the luxurious berths were already made up.

How Chiliano Joe worked out his problem, and how Quilten was involved, the concluding passages of this remarkable narrative make clear. The whole appears in the magazine given free with tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Held for Threats to Blow Up Liners as Was Lusitania

NEW YORK, June 5.—Detectives stationed at a mail drop in the general postoffice arrested Frederick A. Stillwagon, a resident of Long Island, and charged him with sending fourteen threatening letters to officials of the Cunard line demanding sums from $20,000 to $25,000.

Stillwagon was arrested after, according to the police, he had mailed another letter to the Cunard Line. The police declare that he prisoner admitted mailing the letters.

In several of the letters Stillwagon is alleged to have threatened to blow up vessels of the Cunard Line unless his demands were complied with.

Immediately after the destruction of the Lusitania, the police charge, the writer of a letter received at the Cunard offices stated that one of his bombs placed in the ship before she sailed from New York was responsible for the disaster.

Donovan Protests Wood's Licorice Ball

NEW YORK, June 5.—Manager Bill Donovan of the Yankees has entered a protest against Joe Wood's use of licorice juice on the ball when he pitches.

Joe won a 12-inning game from the Yanks the other day, holding the New Yorkers in the palm of his hand when hits were needed. This particularly stirred Donovan into protesting to Ban Johnson in hopes that Wood will be barred from using his pet scheme.

According to Donovan, Wood spits the licorice on only one side of the ball, leaving the other side white. This whirling of black and white mystifies the batters in an unfair manner. To prove his statement Donovan mailed to Johnson several balls that were used in the game Woodie pitched, and he feels sure Big Ban will side with him.

Fresh Favors for Fans

By H. W. LANIGAN

The way the American League scrapping is going, it looks as if the strength was pretty equally divided between the two sections. At that, the West, at current writing, has got to be credited with being in a wee bit better than the East, for the most excellent reason that its White Sox and its Tigers are playing strictly high class ball, while the Yankees, the Red Sox's one aid in this section, are proving a flivver. The Griffs are floundering, while the Macks are only in to fill up, Connie being out to reconstruct his busted family.

The White Sox and the Tigers opened with victories in the East and over our two best clubs, too. Bro. Mitchell has niftily described what was doing at Fenway Park. Over in Gay Gotham, Jean Dubuc, that squatty little Canuck, who is at his best this campaign, blanked the backing-up Yanks. Hits off Jean totaled but four and the Broadway Boys never had a real chance at any stage of the route. That was because Ray Caldwell, the Salamanca floppist, though going right pertly himself, allowed a deuce to come for a starter.

The Dodgers continue winning and by virtue of pickling the Pirates yesterday, passed our Braves and moved into third place. Southpaw Cooper, who blanked the Cubs in his last out, was wickedly whaled. "Hi" Myers was Big Robbie's big man in the frolic. He robbed Hinchman of an apparent triple in No. 1 and turned Baird's well-intended long boy in No. 6 into a sacrifice spiral. The two catches are said to have been especial beauts. "Hi" likewise hit harshly, ramming out two doubles and a single and driving over four runs.

Now, Cooper is a good pitcher and he pitched good ball until No. 6. Then he walked two Dodgers and netted four pokes, the last a two-bagger by Myers.

"Dutch" Stengel vied with Myers in pulling the circus stuff. He made a James Dandy grab of a liner from Hinchman's club and also put the kibosh on a threatened Pirate rally in No. 7 by backing to the screen and clutching on to Schang's stiff soak.

* * *

Charley Herzog reinstated Pitcher Douglass in the a. m. and sent him against the Cardinals in the p. m. And C. H. is sorry. Douglass got burned for five runs in three innings, and as "Blonde Dan" Griner pitched air-tight ball, that cluster was a-plenty.

* * *

Art Butler, injured last Monday, got back in the game for the Cards. He had a pudgy afternoon. Art fielded a la Weaver; twice drove over a run and scored two tallies himself. Griner would have blanked the Reds but for uncorking a wild pitch in No. 5. Snyder was the only Card failing to plunk the pill safely.

* * *

Lee Fohl's Indians made a bad start in the East, though it really wasn't Steen's fault they opened with a black mark in Washington. Bum fielding took the heart out of the eminent flinger and towards the close they do say he was merely lobbing up the ball.

* * *

Jim Shaw at last found himself. 'Twas only the second time this advancing Summer that he has managed to stay out a started combat. In his other giltedge start he made the White Sox look foolish. Shaw had the Indian sign on the Indians, holding them to five well-scattered blows. Back of him the clan of Griff finally performed like a major league outfit.

* * *

Carl Weilman of the Browns finally went wrong. Shoved off in front with a lead of three runs against the foolish Athletics, he allowed his benders to be freely slapped all the way. The result was that the Mackites busted back into the W column.

* * *

The Browns got off to a hurrah start. Austin's single, "Tillie" Walker's double, a fumble by Malone, the new Mackite, and a bum chuck by Kopf, gave the Westerners three runs to begin with. Right away the Athletics got busy. Lavan booted Walsh's hopper and Oldring bumped out a homer. In No. 3 Kopf sneaked in an infield single, Bush sacrificed, Murphy singled and Walsh doubled, thereby putting the Athletics in front. In No. 8 McAvoy went around with a useless run on a miscue by Leary, Malone's fielder's choice and Kopf's one spot.

Well! Well! And that makes Toronto the champs of the whole blooming universe. The word blooming is used owing to what's doing across the big pond.

Folks in baseball cannot forget Fielder Jones. He really gave the American League its first stellar conquest. That was back in 1906, when, with his "hitless wonders," he bagged the blue-ribbon title from the Cubs, "the team of the century" at that stage of the game, and thus gave the Johnsonian institution its first taste of high life. Jones is now allied with the Feds. He is handling St. Louis, which was Jim Gilmore's biggest graveyard a year ago. Jones' club got off none too well this year, but he now has it on its stride and it bids fair entering the Fancy Four at an early date. The Sloufeds made it three straight over Joe Tinker's Whales yesterday and truth it is that J. T. is chaperoning a mighty impressive ball club.

EXETER-ANDOVER IN ANNUAL GAME

EXETER, N. H., June 5.—Exeter and Andover, the two great rival preparatory schools of the East, will face each other on Plimpton Field, Exeter, this afternoon in their thirty-fourth annual baseball contest.

The New Hampshire academy team has had a remarkable string of victories this year in its preliminary contests, winning from Maine University, Dartmouth varsity and several strong freshman and preparatory school teams, while but one defeat—by Worcester Academy—has been suffered by the Exonians. Andover, too, has kept her slate clean with the exception of a defeat by this same Worcester aggregation.

Exeter, however, has shown rare hitting and run-scoring ability, her tallies in thirteen games totaling 146 to her opponents' 26, and because it has a strong defensive team is being picked as a slight favorite in today's battle.

"Charley" Comerford, who will essay the mound work for the Red and Gray, has developed from a fair second string pitcher last year into one of the steadiest winning pitchers Exeter has ever had. It is expected that he will have little difficulty in stopping the Andover batsmen.

Captain Butterfield will do the pitching for Andover, and although he is a clever boxman, he will have his troubles holding back Exeter's heavy artillery. Sheehan will catch for Andover, but the entire lineup will not be given out until just before the game.

Exeter's lineup will start the game as follows: Martin, r.f.; Peters, c.; Atha, 3b.; Lowe, l.f.; Cleveland, 2b.; Fitzgibbons, 1b.; McNamara, c.f.; Clough, s.s.; Comerford, p.

BRAVES BEGIN SERIES IN WEST

CINCINNATI, June 5.—The Boston Braves inaugurate their first Western tour of the season on the local lot this afternoon. Pitchers James, Hughes, Regan, Tyler and Strand and Outfielder Moran, forming the advance guard, arrived late last night. They came to Redland direct from Boston.

The Hon. Hank Gowdy got in this morning, having spent yesterday with his family and friends in Columbus, while Evers came on by himself from Troy. Chief Stallings and the other players had a close fit reaching here in time for the matinee, making what was pretty nearly a record-breaking ride from Toronto, where the Braves played an exhibition game yesterday.

James, who was taken off the firing line after pitching only two innings against the Giants Thursday, is generally picked to be Stallings' slab nominee for the work in today's opener. Hughes is the second choice. It is Leon Ames' turn to whirl for the clan of Herzog, but as the Red leader is especially anxious to start the home stand with a victory, and thus save the business at Garry Herrmann's yard, he may trot out Jean Dale, who shut out the Braves when he worked against them in Boston last week. Dale pitched one full game and part of another in the recent long series with the Cardinals. Still, it is practically even money he shows.

Ames has not performed since the second game in St. Louis last Monday. The Cardinals knocked him out in six innings, flattening his slants for ten hits while he was on the job. The ex-Giant is confident he will come back at the Braves' expense, and, if he does not work today, will be seen on the firing line tomorrow.

Brookfeds Corral Former Brave Star

NEW YORK, June 5.—Fred Smith, an infielder, has been turned over to the Brookfeds by Buffalo in payment for Artie Hofman. Manager Lee Magee of the Brookfeds has hopes of solving the infield problem through the acquisition of Smith, a splendid fielder, who batted .222 for Buffalo last season. Smith was with the Braves in 1912 and 1913.

FOSTER OUT TO HALT WHITE SOX

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

If the White Sox keep up the style of play they showed here yesterday they will win the American League pennant to a certainty. For if all their games are like yesterday's they cannot be beaten. But it is not expected they can keep up the extraordinary pace they set in the first game and today there may be a different story to tell when all the runs are counted.

At the same time, the White Sox have a great staff of pitchers to show us and if Faber pitches today he will of course, try to put another knot in his brilliant string of victories. It is about time, however, that this pitcher lost a game and the Red Sox are about due to administer the defeat.

The chances are that George Foster will do the twirling for our boys. He has pitched some fine games this season, and with the proper kind of support with a little good hitting mixed in, the Red Sox stand a good chance of bringing home the bacon.

Carrigan and his men are working hard. The dissentions in the team—if there were any—have all been smothed over. Everybody is working their hardest for success and that kind of work is bound to tell. The players are hankering for a spell of warm weather. So, it may be added, are the fans who have been forced to stand for some cold deals lately.

Expect Close Game.

The Dorchester Centrals will cross bats with the South Boston Blue Sox this afternoon at the Ashmont Playgrounds. A closely contested game is expected.

HOW THOMAS, AMERICAN BOXER, WON TWO FRENCH RING TITLES

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLEY THOMAS was earning a livelihood by engaging in six round bouts in Philadelphia. Like hundreds of other American boys, Thomas was anxious to see the points of interest in Europe. Therefore, he packed his grip and took passage for the Old World.

Thomas visited the places of interest in Europe and incidentally took part in a number of boxing bouts. He won the lightweight championship of France by defeating Papin in fifteen rounds, while he defeated Louis De Ponthieu in a tussle for the featherweight championship of France.

This is the story of how Charley Thomas, an American boy, born in Philadelphia, in the grand old State of Pennsylvania, won the featherweight and lightweight championships of France.

THOMAS is in Boston accompanied by Fred Sears, his manager. Sears is a business partner of Billy McCarney who managed the late Luther McCarty.

The Philadelphia glove wielder has come to the Hub to battle a young man who answers to the name of Charley White, and who hails from the city of Chicago. The boxers are scheduled to exchange blows in a twelve-round bout, which will be held at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night.

The wise men declare that White will not experience much trouble in winning from Thomas. The latter come's right back at his critics and asserts that he will give White the hardest tussle he has had during his ring career.

"I recently held White to a six-round draw in Philadelphia," says Thomas. "He hit me often enough, but his blows did not slow me up any and I forced the fighting for the greater part of the distance and had my opponent in poor condition when the whirl ended."

There you are, boys. Now go and make up your book.

"YOUNG" DYSON, the young man who has been a big factor in keeping Rhode Island on the boxing map for these many years, will be back in the ring at the Rhode Island A. C., in Thornton, next Wednesday night. Ray Cass, manager of Dyson, has signed his protege to clash with "Young" Brown of New York in a twelve-round tussle. Brown has met such men as Jack Britton and Willie Beecher and should carry Dyson along at a merry clip. "Young" Britt of New Bedford and Tommy Shea, the New London featherweight, will exchange blows in the semi-final match of eight rounds.

LEACH CROSS proved that he is not a back number when he won from Ad Wolgast in New York the other night. The wise men declare every few months that Leachie is a dead issue in the lightweight class. The East Side dentist then engages in a battle in which he upsets the "dope" and disposes of a high-class performer. Cross and Wolgast put up a sensational battle, according to the reports of the boxing experts who witnessed the encounter. Wolgast carried the fight to Cross for seven sessions, but then tired and the New Yorker grabbed off the high honors.

OUR old friend Matty Baldwin says that he is ready to clash with any of the dear old lightweights who have an idea that they possess boxing class. Charlestown's esteemed citizen proved that he is still there in more ways than one when he fought Willie Ritchie at the Atlas Club. The management of the triple A organization tried to match Baldwin with White. Matty was willing to meet the Windy City favorite, but Eddie Murphy, his manager, was unable to reach a satisfactory agreement with the powers that be at the Atlas Club. Baldwin will probably be signed to clash with the winner of the White-Thomas mixup. Both of these men are sweet punchers, but we do not believe that either of them would be able to stop Baldwin in a twelve-round skirmish.

THE fifteen-round bout between Dave Powers of Malden and "K. O." Palitz, which was scheduled to be decided in New London on June 9, has been called off. Fred Nolan, manager of Powers, is of the opinion that those persons interested in Palitz feared that he would be knocked out again by the Malden welterweight.

A WELL known magazine writer refers to one of our billiard table builders as the oldest ivory hunter in the world. The dear old scribbler evidently never heard of Johnny McGraw, boss of the Giants.

JACK JOHNSON plans to go on the stage in London, chirps a headline writer. Well, what of it? A few months ago every news item which contained Johnson's name was worth space on the front page, but times have changed since Aunt Hannah started to dance the one-step.

Harry Lord Is Named Manager of Buffalo Feds

BUFFALO, June 5.—Harry Lord, former Red Sox star, now playing third base for the Buffeds, was appointed manager today to succeed Larry Schafly who has resigned. Lord joined the team last week.

In announcing the retirement of Schlafly, President Robertson said: "We parted the best of friends, but the officials of the club believed a change in managers was necessary. We had given Schlafly a fair chance, but he failed to deliver the goods. We believed right now that we have the best team in the Federal League, and why it is not in a higher position we cannot understand. The club is too good a one to be hugging that cellar position all season. Now is the time to begin to climb if we ever expect to enjoy a higher place this year."

Ed Riley Elected Dartmouth Captain

HANOVER, N. H., June 5.—Edward C. Riley of Lawrence was elected captain of the Dartmouth track team for next year at a meeting of all the "D" men. Riley is a member of the junior class and has been a member of the track team for two years. The election was unanimous. He won the 440 at the New England Intercollegiates this year and was beaten out for fourth place in the last few yards at the big Intercollegiates, scoring a point.

"The Rabbit's" Column
By Walter J. Maranville
Shortstop of the Braves

CINCINNATI, June 5.—Here's the way they do it in the South Atlantic League, according to an exchange: "In contending for advantage Manager Gasto of Jacksonville seized upon Manager Harbison of Columbia and actually tried to eat him up—biting him in the hand so severely that Harbison was unable to play for a week."

* * *

Ty Cobb explains that it is increasingly difficult for Walter Johnson to make a showing this year, because they are now sending in the very heaviest pitching obtainable every time he starts. He thinks that the slight weakening of Johnson's form has caused this. Club managers once conceded the game that Johnson pitched was lost, hence they never wished their best twirlers on him when he worked. The consequence was Johnson really had cinch hurling to do in the old days.

Now he has a battle every game he goes in, no weaklings being sent against him, because club managers think he has faded just a little.

But Johnson's "fading" we attribute to something entirely different than a withering arm this year. It is the fact that his team can't make the runs behind him. The sluggers that won games for Walter are no longer slugging. If you think differently, size up the record of Johnson this year.

In one place you will find where the club made but one run for him in four games—and the day his teammates made the single tally Johnson won his game.

That's about enough said.

Old Joe McGinnity, who for years was referred to as the "Iron Man," because of the fact that he appeared to thrive under hard work, is still actively engaged in the diamond pastime. He passed out of the majors several years ago, but did not quit the sport. At present he is manager and part owner of the Tacoma, Wash., team, and is also one of its most dependable pitchers. He has turned in several small-hit games this Spring, and is going along so well that he will probably pile up quite a record of victories before the season is over. He was always a marvel for control and strength. He pitched many full games every year in the majors, and was a wonder at rescue work.

President Gwinner of the Pittsfeds, is incensed by the statement said to have been made by Howard Camnitz, recently released by the club, that he contemplated entering suit against the club officials for ten days salary said to be due him.

"It is doubtful if any player has ever received better treatment than has Howard Camnitz," said Gwinner, "but he was found unworthy and has been let out. It is said that Camnitz proposes suing the club for ten days' pay. Instead of doing this, he should make some effort to return the money I loaned him after he was released. I did this after he told me he was hard up, although we had paid him every cent coming to him.

"The trouble with Camnitz started on the first trip east. During the series with Brooklyn, Camnitz broke all rules of training and should have been let out at that time. Manager Oakes continued to believe, however, that he would straighten up, and for this reason did not send him home. Things went from bad to worse, and when the team came home I decided to release him. Baseball is no place for a man of his habits, and I do not care to have any such players on my staff.

"On Saturday Camnitz handed me a letter in which he said he wished to call my attention to the fact that he was reporting for duty every day. He may report as long or as often as he wishes, but he will never receive a penny from this club or appear in its lineup. Unless he takes immediate steps to return the money loaned him, I will endeavor to collect through the courts. As for his entering suit against the club, I would be greatly pleased, as the public would then learn the kind of ball players who are not wanted."

Members of the Yankees who talked shop yesterday related a story as to the methods of the White Sox to win games in Chicago. There may be no truth in these yarns, but you can take them for what they are worth. It is said that before the games at Comiskey's Park the ground keeper sprinkles the diamond and the basepaths, so that the playing surface is dead. The White Sox, accustomed to handle grounders that do not take sharp bounds, have a pronounced advantage over their opponents. It is further asserted that the batting of the White Sox is due to a signal tipping scheme, but it is hard to believe that Comiskey would knowingly permit such tactics. Perhaps these yarns are due to jealousy or personal feelings, but the New York players who indulged in this gossip declared that the White Sox would soon hit the toboggan away from home.

HOLY CROSS NINE MEETS FORDHAM

WORCESTER, June 5.—A thrilling diamond battle is expected when the Holy Cross nine battles Fordham this afternoon in a game to decide the championship of the Catholic colleges. The tussle has aroused considerable interest and a large crowd is expected to turn out in order to witness the festivities.

This is the second game of a series between Holy Cross and Fordham. The first contest was staged several weeks ago and the local outfit breezed in a winner after a close game, by a count of [illegible].

If Holy Cross is able to dispose of Fordham today, it will have a clear claim to the baseball championship of the Catholic colleges. The Purple nine won two out of three games from Georgetown, while it captured the single contest which it played with Boston College.

McCarthy will probably do the pitching for Holy Cross today. This youngster has been doing some grand work on the mound, and he may be relied upon to make things interesting for the visitors. Either Murphy or Carroll will handle McCarthy's deceptive slants.

It is believed that Martin will do the honors on the hill for Fordham.

Queen Quality Has Hard Game Today

The Queen Quality and United Shoe Machinery teams will clash in the second game of the series at the South End grounds this afternoon and a bitter battle is anticipated. 25-Mile motor paced race—George Seres, France, vs. George Wiley, Syracuse, N. Y., vs. Elmer Collins, Lynn.

Sprint match race—Alf Grenda, Tasmania, vs. Marcel Dupuy, France.

Amateur and professional events.

George Seres, the world's greatest pace follower, and Marcel Dupuy, a sprinter of great repute, will make their first appearance at the Revere Cycle Track tonight.

Seres meets George Wiley and Elmer Collins in a 25-mile motor paced race, while Dupuy will be pitted against Alf Grenda in a special sprint match. A fine card of professional and amateur races will be run in between the two big events.

The announcements of Seres' debut at the beach oval has created considerable interest among the local bike "fans." Seres is recognized as the champion of them all when it comes to following pace but he is meeting a worthy pair in Wiley and Collins, a pair who are sure to bring out everything that is in an opponent.

In spite of Seres' great reputation a majority of the local "fans" are willing to back Wiley and Collins to the limit.

The sprint match should prove a fast contest. Grenda is traveling at high speed this season, among his latest victims being Al Goullet and Frank Kramer. Any man who can clean up this pair in the same race must be reckoned with. Dupuy has been doing well at Newark, where he beat "Reggie" McNamara, one of the stars of Boston's last six-day race.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"SWEETZER," she said, "she's gone." When I went back with the orangeade she was gone. She must have smelt a rat, Sweetzer. She must have seen your eyes in the peacock's tail. See, I had everything ready, here's the trunk waiting for her."

Sweetzer looked at the trunk. He could think of nothing better to do.

"Well, then," he said, "how about the thousand?"

Mrs. Baxter simply laughed in his face.

"How about the gas company you got me to put up a thousand for?" she said. "You give me my thousand and I'll give you yours."

"You go to the devil," said Sweetzer, furiously. And he tore open the front door and marched down the front steps.

Mrs. Baxter locked the front door and chained it, and then she sat down on the trunk containing Celestia and had a luxurious fit of hysterics.

Celestia woke neither sick nor dazed, but cool-minded and rested, in a broad, cool bed. It was Mrs. Baxter's entrance on tiptoe that had waked her. Mrs. Baxter carried a tray upon which was an orange, coffee and rolls.

"You've had a long sleep, dearie. How do you feel?"

"Very well and happy, thank you."

When you've had your breakfast you'll have to go away. I can't keep you here; it wouldn't be right. It wouldn't be safe."

Celestia's great eyes asked questions, to which Mrs. Baxter gave no direct answer.

"I've done all I can for you," she said. "I'm very sorry I can't do any more."

It did not take Celestia long to eat her breakfast and make her exceedingly simple toilette. But during these processes she thought and thought, until things became clear to her, and she knew that she had been in grave peril.

Mrs. Baxter burst into sudden tears at Celestia's departure.

"I may never see you again. But I'll never forget you—oh, I've been a wicked woman; but I'll try not to be wicked any more and it's you that done it."

And she thrust the bills which Sweetzer had given her into Celestia's hands.

"I came from heaven to help you," said Celestia simply. "Good-by and God bless you."

Her eyes, bright as stars, she went out into the early sunshine, and walked slowly in an easterly direction, her head high and the band of jewels gleaming brightly across her brow.

By the time she passed under the first lines of elevated tracks a crowd had collected about her. They did not show her any disrespect at first, perhaps because she had such a royal look of self-sufficiency. But as the crowd increased, persons in the outskirts who could not see her well, began to make themselves unpleasant. And this example began to be followed by those who were nearer to her. She was not angry or frightened, but progress became more and more difficult, and she looked this way and that for a way of escape.

The door of a mean little house stood wide open. Furniture was being carried out of the house, and there was a middle-aged woman who kept dabbing her eye with her apron.

Celestia made a dart for the door, the crowd now hooting and threatening, reached it, closed it behind her, and was alone in a narrow hallway with the woman who wept.

"What is the trouble?" she asked gently.

The woman's eyes widened with wonder as she looked upon her chance visitor.

"My husband is sick with a broken arm. We can't pay the rent and the landlord is throwing us out into the street."

"Oh, but he mustn't do that," said Celestia. She was still holding the bills which Mrs. Baxter had given her.

"Where is your husband?"

Almost in a state of coma Mrs. Douglas, for that was the woman's name, led the way into a room from which everything had been taken but one chair. In this sat a middle-aged, patient-looking, blue-eyed man, his right arm in a sling. At his side stood a pretty girl of about the same age as Celestia.

"See," said Celestia, "here is lots of money. A good woman gave it to me. And please will you help me for a little while, because I have no place to go, and you look like good people."

Douglas had never seen so much money at one time.

"Who are you, m'm?" he asked. "Where are you from?"

His eyes were blinking rapidly with awe and wonder.

"I am Celestia. I have come from heaven to help you." He looked into her eyes for a long time. Then suddenly he fell on his knees before her.

"Before God," he said, "I believe you."

Then as suddenly as he had knelt he rose and hurried from the room, groping with his left hand as if he was blind.

The young girl followed him.

"He's broken down," said Mrs. Douglas in a voice full of tears and awe, "and he don't want you to see him cry. Just excuse me—please—a minute—he's my husband—he's my husband."

And she, too, left the room, and Celestia was alone, but not for long. Her quick ear caught the sound of a stealthy movement.

"You, Freddie," Sweetzer had said, "if you drop eyes on that girl, you bring her to me—understand? There's money in it," and he added, with a kind of fierce jocosity, "bring her dead or alive." But Freddie the Ferret had understood only the words and not the jocosity. So, when, with his usual bull luck he found the object of his search, right in the parlor of his very own father's house, he cast about for a weapon with which to subdue, or, if necessary, kill her. There was money in it.

When Celestia turned and saw him he had in his right hand a heavy table leg and upon his half-witted face a scowl of the utmost ferocity.

Why Worry?

Troubles Always Worse in Anticipation Than in Fact, Says Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"THE legs of the stork are long, the legs of the duck are short; you cannot make the legs of the stork short, neither can you make the legs of the duck long. Why worry?" says the Chinese philosopher.

The world is not at all as most of us would have it. In Summer we who work in the great cities must face long stretches of hot days when we drag through our toil in sweltering discomfort.

But what do we accomplish if when the first hot day of July arrives we begin to worry lest this be the beginning of a "hot spell?" Neither heat nor cold is any the easier to bear because we worry about our ability to bear it.

Do you know why an aching tooth troubles you most at night? During the day your tooth has ached a bit, but you have been busy about your tasks and have had little time to spend in considering the pain, or if you did consider it at all it was to dismiss it with the idea that if it got unbearable you could run in your dentist's office for a minute and seek relief.

At night how different the case of your tooth versus you! You lie down in fear lest it begin to ache and thus cause you suffering. You worry yourself into a state of weak receptiveness where pain and jangled nerves may have full sway. You imagine how dreadful the pain will be when it comes.

All worry has as poisonous an effect as this! Never was there wiser motto than this one popular a few years ago: "I have had many troubles in my life—and most of them never happened."

Troubles are always worse in anticipation than in fact. Sorrow, suffering, poverty, shame—any evil that befalls you—can be endured when the time comes for facing it. Strength is found for facing reality—or else one goes under and is finished! But for the waste and wear and tear and silly foolishness of tilting at shadows, there is no remedy—except just to STOP.

Worry brings trouble nearer, makes it happen sooner, clouds hours that might well have been sun filled, weakens the power of enduring when real trouble arrives. Worry nets you no gain, gets you no power. There is never an antidote for worry in action of a useless sort. It never sanely works out methods of avoiding evil. It is just flustered fright that cannot take proper precautions to prevent harmful happening.

Why worry? There are many things in life that cannot be changed and that must be endured. Winter is bound to have blizzards; Summer is sure to have scorching sunshine, but against facts of climate and natural phenomena, against strong physical reactions and fatigue and pain and hunger and thirst, worry will not avail you.

Suppose you have not been sleeping well; suppose you have an uncomfortable habit of blushing, suppose you are tongue-tied in company; none of these things (or others even more annoying) will work you any great harm. Men have lived to be eighty and have been sound and active in spite of not sleeping four hours a night on an average for thirty years.

People who blush or are tongue-tied and awkward in company often win friends through their very simplicity and shy sweetness.

I know a man who for ten years was a "merchant prince." During all that time he made himself miserable worrying about the possibility that he "might starve in a garret" some day. Recently he met with financial ruin. His worrying had not impelled him to take precautions or save for "a rainy day." But his worrying had clouded the ten years that might have been happy.

Why worry? There is no force for good in worry; no impulse to ward off evil; no strength to combat danger. Worry makes nerves and wrinkles; it is the traitor who opens the citadel of your personality to evil; it wears you out anticipating suffering, so that you are not strong to combat it if come it should; it creates an atmosphere in which calamity flourishes.

When you have trouble that can be met by action or warded off by foresight, by all means act and plan. When you suspect or imagine an unpleasant possibility why brood over it until you have manufactured your own little "old man of the sea" to carry as a burden?

When you face facts of nature, of society, of your own personality, why worry about the way they are going to work out?

If you come ever to some swift current over which there is no bridge perhaps you can turn and go some other way? If not there may be a ferry to carry you over—or perhaps you will find you can swim or even ford the waters. The evil you can imagine—the way out you may not be clever enough to conceive. Why worry?

"The legs of the stork are long; the legs of the duck are short. You cannot make the legs of the stork short; neither can you make the legs of the duck long. Why worry?"

Do You Know That—

Coral reefs and islands are formed by the coral-building polyp. These animals only live in clear water, the depth of which is not greater than about twenty-five fathoms, and the temperature of which does not fall below sixty-eight degrees Fahrenheit.

The greatest distance at which an object at sea-level, or on the surface of a plain, can be seen by a person whose eyes are at a height of five feet from the same level is 2¾ miles.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy is a great numismatist and possesses a collection of over twenty thousand coins, said to be the finest in Europe.

Out of over one hundred and sixty inmates of a lunatic asylum only one had red hair, and only four were of light hair and complexion.

Less than a thousand Victoria Crosses have been awarded since they were first fashioned in 1856.

Their Married Life

Helen Learns the Value of Self-Control in an Argument with Warren

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

WARREN finished his coffee and got up hurriedly.

"I may be late tonight," he said, as he left the room. "Don't wait after six thirty."

Helen looked up as he spoke.

"Why, dear, this is the day you promised to go and select the new oilcloth for the kitchen."

"I know it is, but when I have work on my hands I can't get off for such a thing as picking out oilcloth, can I? You women act as if you didn't have any sense sometimes."

Helen flushed indignantly, but said nothing, and Warren lingered as though he wanted to say something.

"It's funny you have to pick out just the day I'm busy," he said, finally.

"But I didn't know you would be busy today, Warren; you didn't, either, when you said you'd go."

There was no denying this truth, and Helen turned back to her breakfast as though the conversation was finished. A choking sob was rising in her throat, and she felt like retorting, but she kept still, valiantly fighting for self-control. Her eyelids stung and her hand trembled as she lifted her coffee cup to her lips.

"I'll go, dear, if that will help," said her mother.

"No, mother, I'll wait, of course. Last time we had a new oilcloth Warren insisted upon going with me before I brought home anything so ugly again, and that is the reason we were going together. Warren doesn't credit me with much sense sometimes." And Helen turned away as the tears began to roll down her cheeks.

She went into her room and dabbed at her eyes. The sun was streaming in gaily and the breeze was light and fresh. Somehow the weather was too beautiful for domestic troubles and yet Helen was always in hot water lately. Warren hardly spoke a word at meals and continually growled at everything she tried to do for him.

He had reproved Winifred severely the night before and the child had sobbed her heart out for a punishment that she had found hard to bear. Helen had tried to slip in and soothe her, but as she had risen to leave the room Warren had remarked sneeringly:

"I have never known a time yet that you haven't interfered when I have spoken to that child. No wonder she's spoiled."

"But, Warren, she didn't do anything, at least anything that she knew was wrong."

"That's right; take her part; well, I'm done," he concluded, throwing the paper down and leaving the room.

The whole thing had come about the spots Winifred had made with her dainty little hands on Warren's clean laundry that had been left on the bed.

"It was my fault if anyone's," said Helen to her mother as she undressed Winifred and bathed her face and hands before tucking her away for the night. "I can't understand what makes Warren so touchy lately. He never used to be that way."

"Perhaps he has some business worries," suggested her mother.

"But we have the car, and I thought everything was splendid."

"Something recent may have come up. You know times are hard and he did warn you about bills the other night."

Helen said nothing more, but the words sank deep. If Warren had any trouble that he was trying to bear alone there was ample excuse for the short replies and his gruff manner. She had thought over it far into the night and had slept late that morning in consequence. She thought of this now and resolved to try and help Warren as much as she could. At least, if he weren't willing for her to help share the trouble she could stop worrying over small things.

"I must go out and do some marketing," said Helen after a few moments.

"Can't you telephone?" said her mother.

"I could, but to tell the truth, I want to get out in this wonderful air."

"We'll all go," said her mother. "It certainly is too beautiful to stay in."

The walk in the brisk air, the brushing up against other people, the sunshine and the pleased companionship did wonders in restoring Helen to her usual good humor. They went into a bakery and bought some delectable looking cream cakes for lunch and Helen even bought a little box of cherries, although the price was exorbitant.

"Mr. Curtis called up," said Nora as they came in.

"What did he want, Nora?" questioned Helen.

"He wanted me to tell you that he simply could not make it for this afternoon, but he would go tomorrow, and that he was sorry."

"Wasn't that nice of him, mother," said Helen happily, glad to be thankful for small favors. "The poor boy. I hope he doesn't work too hard."

Zoe—The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

IT was a dinner of four men at the Junior Regent Club—four men whose names were world-known, whose combined power and combined wealth might easily be construed into a national menace. The ostensible reason of the convivial gathering was the friendly discussion, without prejudice, of certain matters in dispute in connection with a great rubber company in course of formation.

Three men, millionaires all and giants of finance, were standing out, or trying to stand out, against certain demands of Sir Godfrey Brooke, the new K.C.M.G., and the concessionaire of the vast forest lands in Central Africa. The actual reason was probably known only to Lord Lemonvale, though guessed at by his two colleagues, Mr. Hermann and Mr. Enrico Polita. Lemonvale wanted Sir Godfrey to talk. "In vino veritas" was his motive.

Brooke was annoyingly reserved and circumspect; Brooke undoubtedly had several big things up his sleeve; Brooke was moreover, without a doubt, driving a very hard bargain. Hermann and Polita, controlling between them money that ran into almost astronomical figures, had tacitly "given Lord Lemonvale his head." They were in the "deal," however, as it turned out; and they they had great faith in his lordship. Also neither of them greatly loved Brooke.

As a matter of fact, Brooke's thoughts were far away. He was regretting the time he was wasting with men who had nothing in common with him. He had no desire to talk business; he had been doing nothing else all day, and his one desire was to get away as soon as he conveniently could without appearing discourteous to his host.

He had told his wife that he would be back at eleven, but he fully meant to be back before that hour, despite the suggestion of Lemonvale that they should go to the Empire and of Polita that they should play bridge.

Lemonvale did not altogether despair until they rose from the dinner table about half-past nine; then he saw that it was no good. Brooke, whether intentionally or not, meant to eschew business topics. He was full of motor cars, and was expatiating with boyish delight on his new machine, and telling them of all the runs he had made this Spring in the South of France.

A very unsatisfactory chat in the the palatial smoking room—unsatisfactory from Lemonvale's point of view, and an exchange of whiskies-and-sodas completed the evening. Brooke, looking at his watch for about the twelfth time, took the plunge.

"Awfully sorry," he said. "I'm afraid I must be off."

"Oh, but not so soon. It's only half-past ten."

Brooke apologized cheerily.

BROOKE MAKES AN EXCUSE AND GOES

"Correspondence," he said, vaguely. "Supper engagement. I ordered my car to be round at ten."

Five minutes afterwards Godfrey Brooke was driving himself down Pall Mall, the drenched chauffeur sitting gloomily by his side.

"Bad storm—eh?" remarked Brooke.

"Awful, sir," said the man. "Lightning struck Doulton's chimney, I hear, sir. Very bad down Chelsea way."

"Pshaw!" grunted Brooke. "You don't know what a storm is in this little country."

An evening paper contents bill informed the world that a woman had been struck dead by lightning in South Lambeth and that Westminster Abbey was reported damager.

"Humph!" remarked Brooke. "What's one woman in a great city?"

"Yes, sir," said the chauffeur, deferentially, "of course, sir. Still, one life may mean a lot to someone, you know, sir."

"Bosh!" said Brooke. "Sentimental bosh! I'm not taking personal considerations in the argument. One can't think of sons and daughters when one talks of thunder storms, Snooks."

"No, sir; of course not; nor wives, neither."

"As you say, 'nor wives neither.' But here we are."

They swung slowly into the Savoy courtyard and Brooke felt his heart beat faster. In another minute or two his wife, his little Di, would be in his arms.

What a wonderful thing was love!

* * * *

"Her ladyship," said a gorgeously arrayed hall porter to Brooke as he alighted from his huge motor car, "was called away unexpectedly, and she asked me to tell you that she would not be back till very late."

Brooke's disappointment was plainly shown on his face.

"Called away unexpectedly?" he repeated. "What do you mean?"

"That was her ladyship's message, sir," replied the hall porter.

"Humph!" Brooke frowned in his endeavor to hide his really acute disappointment. He was not particularly curious as to the reason of his wife's absence. It never occurred to him. Had she left word that she had been unavoidably called away to the Orkney Islands or to Tangier, he would have accepted it without question. He vaguely supposed that her mother was ill or that some family illness was the cause, but the paramount feeling was one of almost childish disappointment.

"Will you want me again tonight, sir?" asked Snooks, the chauffeur.

"You'd better wait," said Brooke shortly. "I am not sure."

Then he went up to his apartments. His man Collier was reading the second volume of Ruskin's "Stones of Venice."

"Where's your mistress?" asked Brooke sharply.

"I don't know, sir," answered Collier, whose brain was full of archivolts and cusps and windows of the fifth order. "Her ladyship is out. I'll ask Berenger."

Louise Berenger was Lady Brooke's maid, and she was in bed and asleep. She had had instructions from her mistress justifying such an early retirement three hours ago.

"It doesn't matter," said Brooke. "Don't bother. There's no letter from her ladyship?"

"None, sir."

"Good! Then say, when her ladyship returns, that I have gone round to have a chat with Mr. Crawley. I shall be back very soon."

"Very good, sir."

To Be Continued Monday

Five-Fingered Oranges

A Freak in the Plant World

ONE of the freaks in the plant world is the five-fingered orange of Japan. The tree on which it grows is found only there. Even considered apart from its fruit, it is one of the queerest-looking members of the vegetable kingdom.

The five-fingered orange tree seldom grows higher than six feet, and its twisted, gnarled branches are entangled with its trunk. As if to protect its delicious fruit still more effectively, it sends out a multitude of long, hard, needle-pointed thorns, which cause a most painful wound.

But when in bloom this ugly, cross-grained tree is an immense bouquet of the most beautiful and fragrant fruit blossoms, like those of the ordinary orange tree, and of a particular lovely pink blush color.

Its fruit grows into the exact form of a human hand, with the thumb and four fingers, bearing a startling likeness to the usual manner in which the Japanese and Chinese hold their hands when not using them.

The flowers, which make their appearance in June or July, grow in clusters of two or three blossoms. The fruit is lemon-yellow, growing greenish toward the stem, and is immense. Some of the largest of the matured five-fingered oranges measure eleven inches in length when reckoned from the stem to the end of the long nail on the middle finger.

Strange to say, it is the fruit and not the blossom that gives the stronger perfume. When the fruit is ripe the scent of such a tree can be recognized, if the wind is blowing in the right direction, for more than a mile.

Naturalists have sought in vain for an explanation of the development of this extraordinary fruit into the shape of the human hand.

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE GREATER BOSTON CHURCHES

Baptists from all over New England will be present this evening at the 250th anniversary of the First Baptist Church, Commonwealth avenue.

The anniversary will continue till Tuesday night, when ministers of different denominations of the Back Bay will extend their congratulations to this historic church, the third oldest Baptist church in America. The oldest Baptist church in this country is at Swansea.

The Rev. A. K. de Blois, D. D., pastor of the church, will preach the historical sermon tomorrow morning. Big 10-Vote Coupon Tomorrow

Just twenty-eight days remain in which candidates in the American's California Tours Contest may make the supreme effort to finish among the twenty-five who will take the wonderful trip to the Pacific Coast and Expositions as the guests of this newspaper.

No matter how great the vote-gathering effort or the amount of time spent in rounding up the tour-winning vote coupons, the fortunate candidates who succeed in this contest will be more than amply repaid for all their trouble.

Leaving Boston on Saturday, July 24, at 11:30 a. m., at the height of the vacation season, luncheon will be served in the DE LUXE Pullman Dining Car and the afternoon's trip will be enjoyed passing through the beautiful scenery of the White and Green Mountains.

On Sunday, July 25, the tourists will be en route through Ontario, Canada and Michigan, passing Toronto about 8 o'clock in the morning and through Port Huron and the famous Sarnia Tunnel about noon, arriving at Chicago at 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Sight-seeing will be enjoyed at Chicago on the return trip. The party will leave Chicago over the Rock Island Lines at 10 p. m. Sunday night, July 25. The following day they will be en route through Nebraska and the wonderful grain fields, arriving at Denver on Tuesday, July 27. Here they will make their headquarters at the Brown Palace Hotel, the leading hotel in Denver. Denver is the "Queen City" of the Plains and the commercial centre of the Rocky Mountain Region. Here they will be taken on an AUTOMOBILE TOUR and will visit the business, park and residential sections, the United States Mint, the Auditorium, the shopping and skyscraper districts, and then to Cheesman Park, the highest point in Denver, where they will have an uninterrupted view of 200 miles of mountain range from Observation Point.

But it is impossible, in this short space, to convey any adequate idea of the wonders of the marvelous trip awaiting the winners in this contest.

Suffice it is to say that the Boston American has arranged a tour which will be "DE LUXE" in every sense of the word.

Surely such a Tour is worthy of every candidate's best efforts for the next twenty-eight days.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks ranged lower when markets opened today, particularly in New York. The tone was firmer in Boston, where there was more business in copper shares. Zincs were not as active here as they have ruled of late. Recessions were not large on the average in either market, and in the second hour the tone improved. Irregularity prevailed at the close. There was little demand for stocks at the start, and most of the overnight orders were to sell. The war scare has apparently died out. Sentiment continues to be imbued with confidence. The decision in favor of U. S. Steel in the government's dissolution suit has had more bullish influence than anything of domestic occurrence within many months. The price of copper metal has advanced further, and big buying of the metal is reported. Railroad earnings are increasing, and trade generally is believed to be on the up-grade. Stock exchange business was of fair volume. It is said that profit-taking by large interests was all that prevented a continuation of the advance in the price of securities. It is thought by many market students if international difficulties are amicably settled stocks will go up fast, and perhaps far. While there is less fear of a break between this country and Germany, there is still a strong disposition to wait events. There is uncertainty as to the immediate trend of prices when President Wilson's next note to Germany is made public. The New York bank statement showed surplus reserve amounting to $188,633,720, an increase of $6,360,630.

BIG COPPER BUYING PENDING.

It is said that a pending purchase of copper totals 100,000,000 pounds and that the metal in this instance is required to make ammunition for European belligerents. Sales at 19⅝ cents a pound are said to have been heavy and now it is doubted if much electrolytic can be obtained under 19½ the latest price set by large producers. There is said to be more domestic demand for copper.

The spelter market is as firm as ever. Prices range from 23½ cents for future deliveries to 29 for spot. The price of lead has been raised more than a cent within a week and is likely to go higher.

MORE DEMAND FOR STEEL.

The demand for steel products is steadily increasing. Plants are making ready for more business. It is understood that the U. S. Steel Corporation is booking orders daily that total from 35,000 to 40,000 tons. Most of the business in this trade continues, however, to be upon foreign orders. It is said if the domestic demand becomes normal that plants will have their productive capacity overtaxed.

IRREGULAR AT THE CLOSE.

At the close in New York gains included Anaconda 1½, Amalgamated 1⅝, Chino ⅜, American Smelting ½, New Haven ¼, Reading ½, Bethlehem Steel 1, Willys-Overland 9¾, Maxwell 1½, Studebaker 2⅞ and General Motors 4. Auto stocks were helped by the Ford "melon." Among recessions were American Can 1⅛, American Sugar ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅞, Atchison ½, St. Paul ⅜, Union Pacific 1¼, U. S. Steel 1½ and Corn Products 1.

In Boston gains included Arcadian 2⅞, Boston Elevated 1, Boston & Maine ¼, Butte & Superior ¼, Copper Range ¼ and Isle Royale 1. Boston American Editorial Columns

SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1915.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

The Censorship Law May Not Be a Good Law, But IT IS THE LAW

THE colored people of Boston ought to pay great heed to Mr. Trotter's advice to be "VERY, VERY CAREFUL WHAT THEY DO." "The Birth of a Nation" is permitted to continue its exhibition by the authorities whom the law has constituted the ARBITRARY judges of moving picture shows in Boston.

The AMERICAN does not believe that it is a good law. No men ought to have ARBITRARY power over an important institution like the moving picture shows. Millions of dollars are invested in this business, and it almost seems that the arbitrary power given to these three men might be a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. In the case of "The Birth of a Nation," for example, it is alleged that half a million dollars was spent in preparing for its production. To suppress it arbitrarily upon the whim or caprice of two out of three men almost seems like confiscating property without just compensation or due process of law.

Our courts have not arbitrary power, neither has our Legislature. Arbitrary power is contrary to the genius of our country and our political institutions and our history. The Legislature itself is confined within constitutional limits. The courts are confined within their constitutional and statutory limits. The Governor and the administrative officers are confined within their constitutional and statutory limits. There is no branch of the government or officer of the government whose powers are not defined with as much particularity as is possible. All arbitrary power is capable of abuse. That is why we hate it. This particular arbitrary power over moving picture shows is almost sure, sooner or later, to be abused for partisan or corrupt purposes.

We can see the danger in the very first act of the new board. They have decided to permit the CONTINUANCE of "The Birth of a Nation" without giving the grounds upon which they base their decision. Under such circumstances they can SUPPRESS another exhibition exactly like it and have motives and reasons known only to themselves.

The AMERICAN does not criticise the new board for its action in this respect. They are acting within the law, which was badly drawn and which gives them the power that it is their duty to exercise. Like so many other things enacted by this careless and inefficient Legislature, whose stand-pat leaders have done nothing but play politics throughout the year, this law passed without thought of the future or of its larger consequences.

However, IT IS THE LAW, and the colored people would do well to respect it until they can get a chance to change it, if they are able. They object to some of the features of the exhibition because they allege that it falsely represents the colored people as lawless. Whether they are right or wrong about the play, it is certain that any exhibition of ACTUAL lawlessness now would do them infinitely more harm than a thousand plays like "The Birth of a Nation."

Stop the Export of Arms to Mexico at Once

BEYOND a doubt the United States will inevitably be forced ultimately to intervene in Mexico for the restoration of peace and good order, and for the reconstruction of a civilized state from the ruins of the various dictatorships and revolutionary governments by which that suffering country has been reduced to its present state of anarchy.

But pending that intervention, the President is to be commended for having at last taken a forward step in the Mexican matter. Not very far forward, it is true, but nevertheless a step which indicates a purpose on his part to handle the problem more vigorously later.

Probably the Mexican leaders to whom President Wilson has addressed his communication will prove either unwilling to act in accordance with his recommendations, or incapable of giving them effect. But pending determination of this fact, what could be more sensible on the part of our government than to prohibit immediately the export of arms from this country to any of the factions by which Mexico is now racked and torn?

In November, 1914, Mr. Hearst in a signed editorial in this paper said:

> "The proposal of the administration at Washington to allow the admission of arms into Mexico for the better arming of the Constitutionalists is an astounding evidence of governmental fatuousness, feebleness and folly.
>
> * * * *
> "If the United States shall be compelled to invade Mexico the guns which would be turned against our soldiers would be the guns which the government of the United States had put into the hands of the Mexicans."

Why should we ship arms for the purpose of prolonging a conflict in a neighboring state between factions no one of which is entitled to recognition at our hands, when we as a nation desire peace?

Mr. Bryan is a strong proponent of peace. He is also a strong advocate of prohibition of the liquor traffic. No one now questions the sincerity of Mr. Bryan's devotion to both peace and prohibition. But how long would this conviction of his sincerity last if he took to manufacturing alcoholic liquors and selling them to any who desired them?

THERE SEEMS TO BE NO ETHICAL DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SELLING ARMS TO PEOPLE WHO WANT TO FIGHT WHILE YOU PREACH PEACE AND SELLING LIQUOR TO MEN WHO WANT TO GET DRUNK WHILE YOU PREACH PROHIBITION AND SOBRIETY.

What this nation wants to accomplish in Mexico is to restore peace and to advance the welfare of the Mexican people. But our professed interest in the welfare of the Mexicans is impugned by our readiness to sell to the warring leaders arms with which to continue the fratricidal combat which is laying desolate the whole of that rich and populous country. Moreover, it is sufficiently obvious that these very arms will be turned against us when the inevitable time of our intervention shall arrive.

The President will naturally expect that some time must elapse before he can discover any effects of his vigorous protest of Wednesday. But during that interval he can, with perfect propriety and in accordance with the plain dictates of "duty," "principle" and "humanity," begin the work of suppressing revolutionary and anarchistic activities in Mexico by refusing to let any of those engaged in it draw further supplies of arms or munitions of war from this country.

THE ONE CONVINCING ARGUMENT

Once-Overs

You are no better than your thoughts.

Isn't this the truth? Of course it is.

Then it is up to you to have a house-cleaning in your mind.

If you permitted half the evil which you think to show on the surface, how long would you hold your present position in society?

Not a very pleasant thought, is it?

It is well for you to put yourself on the scales and give yourself honest weight once in a while. The result may shock you, but it will impress you with your need of a mental renovation.

Don't you sometimes wish you were half as good as people seem to think you are? And doesn't this wish inspire you to live up to the position in which you are held?

If it does not, all the advice you may receive from now till the last curtain falls will not benefit you; nor will it make you more of a man than you are now.

What does your self-inventory show?

A Little Nonsense Now and Then

Is Relished by the Suffragists as Well as by the Men—Hence, a Few Words Concerning the Tender Idyl Conceived by Mr. Thomas E. Powers, and Aptly Entitled "Busted Romances"—Together with Some Well-Chosen Remarks in More Serious Vein, on the Subject of the Monthly Magazine which Is Distributed Free with the Sunday American

In the good old days when wage-earners were paid by the month it was commonly said of the man who was as serious as a senator—or the uniformed carriage agent at a hotel—that he had "a face on him like a five-week pay."

People nowadays are altogether TOO serious.

What do men talk about? What do you HEAR, in workshop, store, counting-house, club room or dwelling?

THIS gentleman brings up the question whether the Business Woman, be she ever so successful, is ever truly happy; and he answers NO—and proves it.

The next man desires legal enactment to sanction the regulation of the birth rate, if you get the idea, demonstrates that such legislation will solve the great problems of life, and CHALLENGES you to deny it.

So you walk along, and you keep your ears open, and being after all a wise young person, you hear other zealots clamor for the restriction of immigration; the abolition of tenement houses; the establishment of Equal Suffrage; Mr. Churchill's latest novel, in which he argues that good lawyers are a bad lot; the Case of the Lusitania; Mexico; love, marriage, divorce, and what-not. Everybody, almost, appears to be talking Deep Stuff.

Verily, brethren, "what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue!"

Wherefore we have Mr. Thomas E. Powers, the famous cartoonist, to draw pictures once a week or thereabouts for the Sunday American, furnish laughter for a month, and make all New England one vast substantial smile.

In tomorrow's Sunday American, Mr. Powers offers another "Busted Romance," picturing the thrilling story of Percy Pickles, the callow youth who resolved to marry a bunch of money.

1.—At a party one night he met a wealthy widow.

2.—He taught her the latest tango steps.

3.—And one evening when the moon was full he asked her to marry him and she did.

4.—After the wedding, Mr. Powers wants to know, did his wealthy spouse make Percy a present of a million dollars?

5.—And did he buy himself a $5,000 auto to take his friends joy-riding?

6.—And did he go to a swell tailor and get fitted for 100 suits of glad rags?

7.—And was he elected to all the swell clubs in the city?

8.—And did his rich wife buy him a hydroplane?

9.—And did she also buy him a string of race horses?

The answer—ah! the answer—will be found exclusively tomorrow in the Sunday American; and, receive it from one who has your best interests at heart, "Busted Romances" is worth driving twelve miles for, in the rain.

Tomorrow being the first Sunday of the month every patron of the Sunday American will receive—without extra charge—ONE copy of the American Sunday Monthly Magazine.

While it is given free of charge with the Sunday American, the Sunday American Monthly Magazine is a handsomely illustrated, excellently written magazine of 20 large pages.

Readers frequently have paid 15 cents for magazines that have not begun to compare in merit with the magazine which will be distributed free, tomorrow, with the Sunday American.

In some respects the front-cover painting by Mr. Harrison Fisher, the final number in a series of beautiful illustrations called "The Six Senses," is the most distinguished feature of the magazine. Our readers have been wondering what could possibly be the SIXTH sense. Mr. Fisher calls it "Commonsense." The scene is a truly domestic one, showing us Papa, Mama and King Baby. The young gentleman is dining, so to speak, and they are all SO happy that if we were not already taken we should have called Her on the telephone the minute after Mr. Fisher's drawing was placed before us, some other chap would today be trying to stir your interest in New England's greatest Sunday newspaper, and we would right about now be leaping from crag to crag at Niagara Falls.

Mr. James B. Connolly writes for the American Sunday Monthly Magazine a thrilling Connolly story called "Quilten," worthy of the distinguished Boston writer at his best.

Mrs. Wilson Woodrow contributes a strong story of two women and one man, "The Piper's Price." Mr. Jack London continues his great serial, "The Star Rover."

Having thus, in a rambling manner, called attention to the monthly appearance of the MAGAZINE, there is little room to speak of the news and features of the main part of the Sunday American.

In English pure and undefiled Mr. Julian Hawthorne writes with his wonted charm of a visit to the Wayside Inn of Longfellow, at Sudbury.

Mr. A. H. C. Mitchell, whose recent "Talk with Stallings" was one of the great baseball interviews of the season up to date, reports a lively and intimate chat with Manager John McGraw, of the New York "Giants."

In the great class graduated this month from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology there is just ONE girl. There will be a story about HER in the Sunday American, a photograph, and the faithful chronicle of a little interview.

There being no young man among all the graduates of Simmons College, the editor of the Sunday American presents the photographs of some of the loveliest leaders among the Simmons graduates of 1915, while a careful and conscientious reporter presents the results of a recent Simmons election to determine (1) the most talented member of the class, (2) the most versatile, (3) the wittiest, (4) the most beautiful, etc., etc.

One COULD say more, but a fierce editor observes for the forty-eleventh time that seven hundred and fifty words is seven hundred and fifty words, and that nobody has yet discovered rubber type.

P. S.—One way to avoid the war news on Monday morning is to read it FIRST in the Sunday American, represented by trained journalists of long experience at London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Vienna and Petrograd.

Verbum sap.
